Little News, for Little Men.
The Cohens Lead.
Raven-Haired, Intelligent.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MR. F. J. McCARTHY, editor, and Mr. M. C. Meigs, business manager of the Chicago American, would like the world to know that the Chicago American leads all Chicago newspapers, morning and evening, in circulation gains and in advertising gains.

Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Meigs are young and energetic. It is a pleasure to let the world know that they are also able.

HUMAN BEINGS are little creatures, and little things interest them. Really big things float over their heads with a "what do you think about conditions?" and no definite answer.

In New York, a banker named Harriman is convicted of sixteen crimes against banking, and might be sent to jail for eighty years. That interests some.

A woman named Agnes C. Tufverson is missing, formerly a female lawyer. The man who married her, Capt. Poderzaj, is in Vienna with another wife. The first wife is supposed to have been murdered by somebody.

That interests the little people, especially when, in a London railway station, packed tightly in a trunk, the "torso" of a woman is found, arms, legs and head missing. The torso lacks the "appendicitis operation scar" necessary to identify Miss Tufverson, but what an interesting coincidence.

LONDON'S anonymous murdered torso is made more interesting by the police announcement that "it would have become a mother, five months later." Police think that the existence of the unborn baby accounts for the mysterious murder.

NEW YORK'S Board of Aldermen unanimously voting 65 to 0 asks the Mayor to remove from office Dr. Fama, medical officer of a fund for retired city employes. It is revealed that Dr. Fama, formerly a Roman Catholic, now a Presbyterian, once wrote in a book that the Roman Catholic Church had wandered from the true gospel because of its "greed for money."

Dr. Fama regrets writing that, nevertheless the Aldermen vote unanimously for the first time in the history of this board, demanding his removal, because there is no room for "a bigot" on the public payroll. Mayor LaGuardia will decide.

IT IS WISE for the Board of Aldermen to vote that there is no room on the city payroll anywhere "for a bigot." There should be no room for real bigots. The Aldermen might wisely and usefully follow that up by another unanimous vote saying there is no room on any public payroll for anyone of a hundred kinds of grafters, thieves, blackmailers and general rogues that the public payroll now supports.

TIMES AND populations change. In New York's new telephone book, summer issue, there are only five and two-thirds columns of Joneses, against twenty columns of Cohens. Cohen is the name that occurs most frequently. Kellys fill only four and a half columns. In the old days when they would have dominated the Cohens, there was no telephone directory. Even the Smiths make way for the Cohens.

PEOPLE, INTERESTED in little things, wonder whether Mrs. Anna Antonio, mother of three small children, will die in the electric chair seven days hence. She will, unless Gov. Lehman commutes the sentence to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Antonio's case is not particularly sympathetic. She was convicted of hiring two young men to kill her husband that she might have his insurance money.

But her two little girls, ten and five years old, and her three-year-old little boy who never killed anybody, arouse sympathy. To be branded through life as the children of an "electrocuted mother" is perhaps worse than dying.

THERE IS ALSO interest in a young married woman described as "raven-haired girl of nineteen years." Her husband, Murton Millen; her brother-in-law, Irving Millen, and associate, Abraham Faber, are sentenced to death for killing a policeman.

The intelligent "raven-haired girl of nineteen years" accused as an accomplice, begs her father, a former clergyman, to send her new clothes to help with the jury. He promises "at least one new dress and a new hat." They might make a great difference. Men are weak.

Elliott Arrives With Wife, Baby To Visit Father

MRS. ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT

FIRST MEETING FOR IN-LAWS

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 21.—(AP.)—Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt and their daughter, 6-weeks-old Ruth Chandler Roosevelt, arrived here at 8 o'clock this morning for their visit to the President's home at Hyde Park.

They arrived by train and were accompanied by a nurse and two secret service men. Two automobiles from the Roosevelt estate, seven miles away, met them at the station.

By airplane and train, the family has come from Fort Worth, Tex. President Roosevelt has never met his daughter-in-law and of course he has not seen his little granddaughter before.

The long journey of the Roosevelts was uneventful. Baby Ruth took it like a veteran traveler, sleeping most of the time, chuckling contentedly when awake.

At a Cleveland railroad terminal, during the fuss attending the family's transfer from plane to train, she voiced disapproval of proceedings by crying.

Loeb 'President' Of Prison School

JOLIET, Ill., June 21.—Richard Loeb, serving a life term for his part in the "thrill murder" of Bobby Franks, has been given the official title of "president" of the state prison correspondence course. Other members of the faculty include Nathan Leopold, also serving a life term for the Franks murder.

Women in Wreck Give Lifeboats to Men

BRIDE 'MURDER' CONFESSION SOUGHT

WOMEN SAVE OLD MEN IN SEA CRASH

Surrender Lifeboats To Aged as Ice Wrecks Liner

KOPERVIK, Karmoy Island, Norway, June 21.—(AP.)—How women who could swim gave up their places in lifeboats to elderly men was told today by a survivor of the wreck of the German steamship Dresden in which four women were drowned.

The steamer, carrying 1,000 German Nazis on a holiday jaunt, was knifed by a rock last night in a heavy sea in the shallow Hardanger fjord.

The Dresden, 14,000-ton ship of the North German Lloyd Line, sank at 7 a. m. today with only part of her bow showing above water.

Tales of heroism were brought to shore from the vessel listing in the choppy waters.

The ship's band played the national anthem and other sprightly marches until the last passenger had been lowered from the decks, the survivor said.

LIFEBOAT UPSETS

He added:

"The second tables had about finished dinner when, with a violent jerk, passengers, tables, furniture and dishes were hurled together on the floor.

"At first there was great panic among the struggling passengers, and as lifeboats were being prepared for launching only the firm action of officers and some passengers maintained order.

"The orchestra continued playing all the while.

"One of the stewards, Willy Bruns, of Warnemunde, proved himself a hero. He dived perilously from the third deck of the Dresden when a lifeboat, crowded with 20 women, capsized as it was being lowered into the water. Bruns himself saved four women who were sinking in the icy waters. Other boats picked up women Bruns could not reach. The steward was almost stiff with cold after his heroic fight in the icy seas."

In the wild panic that followed the crash, 20 women were lowered to the water in a lifeboat; it drifted too close to the whirling propellers and capsized.

FOUR WOMEN DIE

Three women were lost and a fourth, snatched from the churning waters, died soon afterward from her injuries.

Another lifeboat, also carrying 20 women, was being lowered when the gear broke and the occupants were flung into the sea.

The bitter hardships suffered through the night by the survivors, however, did not end with the coming of the day.

Most of them were sheltered in hotels and military barracks here as hospital facilities were quickly exhausted.

One group suffered terribly from an icy wind during the night as did many who stopped in Stavanger.

Most of the survivors were thinly clad, having been forced to flee the ship before they could gather their clothing.

The Norwegian pilot Tacogsen today assumed full responsibility for the wreck of the Dresden. He blamed a heavy mist.

WOMAN DIES FROM DOG BITE

23 Others in Coraopolis Inoculated Against Dread Rabies

Twenty-three residents of Coraopolis were under treatment today against possible infection with hydrophobia following the death of a mother of six children who was scratched while playing with a puppy. That her death was caused by hydrophobia was confirmed today.

The victim was Mrs. Laura Bartley, 37, of Thorn Run road, wife of William M. Bartley, died on June 10 from cerebral hemorrhage due to hydrophobia. She had been stricken only three days before. The mother had been scratched while playing with a pet Eskimo-Spitz puppy a week earlier.

Following her death, Dr. H. B. Speer, of 1100 Main street, Coraopolis, diagnosed her illness and a further analysis at St. Francis Hospital confirmed his findings.

As a result, Bartley, his six children and 16 other friends and neighbors today were given injections of serum as a preventive against further spread of the rabies infection.

Among those being treated were I. W. Newburg, a brother-in-law of the Bartleys, and his five children; Mrs. Edward Thompson, a neighbor, and her three children, and George Meyers, another relative of the Bartleys.

MOVIE CLEAN-UP PARLEY OPENS

CINCINNATI, O., June 21.—(AP.)—Four bishops of the Roman Catholic Church met representatives of the motion picture industry here today to demand a cleanup of salacious movies.

Meeting at the Episcopal residence of Archbishop John T. McNicholas, of Cincinnati, who is head of the League of Decency—a Catholic movement for movie reform—were Bishop John T. Cantwell, of Los Angeles; Bishop John F. Noll, of Fort Wayne, Ind.; Bishop Hugh C. Boyle, of Pittsburgh, and J. E. Breen, virtual director of movie morals.

Martin Quigley, New York theatrical publisher, was expected during the day as a motion picture representative.

Repercussions of the movement to rid the films of objectionable material appeared in other cities.

In Hollywood Emmanuel Cohen, vice president in charge of production for Paramount Pictures, attacked the "to a large extent unjustified wave of criticism" and told exhibitors there was "no deliberate flaunting of the decencies."

At Wooster, O., the Ohio Synod of the Presbyterian Church approved a national campaign "to improve permanently the moral tone" of the movies.

In Washington a report of the Federal Office of Education said children are being influenced by three out of four movies which relate to sex, crime or romantic love.

Lady Furness Denies Romance With Prince

LONDON, June 21.—(INS.)—The American-born Lady Furness today emphatically denied rumors that she has married or is about to marry the son of a wealthy eastern potentate. The former Mrs. Thelma Morgan Converse, who was divorced from Lord Furness a year and a half ago, declared:

"I have no thought of marrying a prince or anyone else just now. There is no reason for such a story."

Attorney Ivory Fatally Stricken At Davis Trial

ROBERT B. IVORY, 75

Dean of Bar Dies On His Way To Court

CARLYLE, Ill., June 21.—Robert B. Ivory, one of the deans of the Allegheny County bar and chief defense counsel at the assault trial here of young Tom Davis, Jr., was found dead today in the hallway of the Carlyle Hotel.

The lawyer apparently collapsed from a heart attack as he was leaving to attend court where a jury still was deliberating the fate of the Pittsburgh high school boy, who was tried for the alleged shooting of a deputy sheriff.

The aged attorney still gripped an empty water glass in one hand when the body was found.

He had retired last night in good spirits and feeling well, friends here said. He had not been in ill health.

Mr. Ivory had dressed and apparently was leaving the hotel when he was stricken. The jury had been out since yesterday afternoon and this morning had given no indication of reaching an agreement.

Friends of the lawyer expressed the belief he probably over-exerted himself yesterday in his stirring closing arguments in behalf of young Davis.

While the jury continued its deliberations, Judge Franklin Dove, who heard Davis' trial, was 50 miles away hearing another trial, but said he would return to Carlyle this evening to receive the Davis verdict if the jury reached an agreement.

Mr. Ivory had been a guest of the hotel here since last Sunday.

Armed Mob Lynches Prisoner in Texas

KIRBYVILLE, Tex., June 21.—(AP.)—Two hundred armed white men last night took Son Griggs, Negro, 30, from officers and hanged him after he had been seen in the company of a 17-year-old white girl.

The mob stopped an automobile of officers as they were taking the Negro to Orange for safe keeping, threw a rope around his neck, dragged him from the car and hanged him. Seventeen shots struck him as he dangled in the air.

Jack McGurn's Club Damaged by Flames

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP.)—A carelessly discarded cigaret early today set fire to the swanky "225" Club on Chicago's near North Side, in which Machine Gun Jack McGurn is reputed to own half interest, causing damage to fixtures estimated at $1,000.

DIARY CLUE IN KILLING OF ACTOR

Teacher's Blackmail Claim Reported Verified

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 21.—The reported discovery of a diary said to belong to George T. Manis, slain female impersonator, today was expected to throw additional light on the death of the youth.

The diary, believed to cover Manis' activities during the past year, was reputedly in the possession of District Attorney Warren S. Burchinal of Washington County.

County authorities were said to be studying the diary in search of a motive for the killing of Manis, whose death has been charged to George Bartholomew, Washington and Jefferson College physical education instructor.

No verification of the reported existence of the diary was made by officials. It is understood, however, that details in the book coincide with facts of the youth's death to frustrate an alleged blackmail attempt.

Coroner William Baker said today that the inquest in the matter of Manis' death may be postponed indefinitely. Bartholomew is still being held in the county jail on the murder charge.

POLICE VETERAN GETS BOYD POST

Traffic Patrolman Harvey Clayton was named today by Public Safety Diretor A. Marshall Bell as captain of detectives.

Clayton succeeds Frank R. Boyd, who resigned from the post.

The new detective captain is a veteran with 18 years of service in the police department. He made a reputation for himself as a "he-man" officer of the law in the Hill district.

Three years ago Clayton was transferred to the traffic division and since then has been stationed in the Diamond district downtown.

Clayton lives at 1309 Steuben street, Crafton Heights. During the war he served 22 months as a sergeant of the One Hundred and Third Military Police, Twenty-eighth Division.

Meanwhile, Sergt. Edmond Bishop, of the Police Bertillon Department, who previously had been slated for the captaincy of detectives, will remain at his old post at an increase in salary. Bell decided that Bishop was "too valuable as head of the Bertillon room to take him from his present position."

Machado Foul Play Rumor Denied by Kin

COLLINGSWOOD, N. J., June 21.—(INS.)—Declaring that "Gerardo Machado is quite capable of taking care of himself," Dr. Guillard Machado, cousin of the missing former President of Cuba, today belittled rumors that the ousted Cuban leader had met with foul play.

Dr. Machado, a dentist and resident of this town for years, declared:

"I believe President Machado is unharmed and well, although I have no knowledge of his whereabouts."

Young Cadet Willed $500,000 by Clark

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—(AP.)—George John Pale, 17-year-old military academy student whose parents were close personal friends of the late industrialist, William A. Clark, Jr., will receive $500,000 under the latter's will it was disclosed today. Pale had made his home with Clark, who died in Montana last week.

Senator William A. Clark and his first wife, mother of W. A. Clark, Jr., were natives of Fayette County, Pa.

Girl Sobs Regret Over Killing of 'Mail Lothario'

MISS LEONA MENSER, 20

Mother Will Aid Her in Court Fight

International News Service.

CLARION, Pa., June 21.—"I didn't go to kill him. I just meant for him to leave me alone."

These words today expressed the sorrow of Miss Leona Menser, 20, Coshocton, O., for John Kelly, her marriage bureau suitor, whom she came here to marry but remained to allegedly kill.

Leona sobbed as she embraced her widowed mother, Mrs. Nettie Menser, in a dismal jail cell.

"I'm sorry it happened, mother. I just couldn't stand it any longer."

She referred to cruel treatment received from Kelly when she lived on his farm near Fisher, Pa., pending their marriage. An argument over the marriage date led to the killing.

The mother pleaded:

"Leona's a good girl. She wouldn't have done this terrible thing except in self-defense."

Then Mrs. Menser came to the defense of the girl who deserted her Ohio home for a marriage bureau lover—her first—and the hope of realizing an ambition—"a home of my own." With a note of pride in her voice, she explained that Leona had a good "Christian bringing-up" and was a regular attendant at church and Sunday school.

LINK CAPTAIN IN NEW LOVE

Suspect Held in Vienna Jilted by Woman Violinist

VIENNA, June 21.—(AP.)—Otto Steinhaeusl, secretary of Vienna's international police organization, said today evidence connecting Capt. Ivan Poderjay with the disappearance of Agnes Tufverson was strengthening. Steinhaeusl said:

"We do not yet have a confession and we can only accuse him of murder when the chain of circumstantial evidence is closed.

"For this we await from America news of the finding of Miss Tufverson's body."

Vienna authorities are convinced that the 43-year-old American woman lawyer is dead.

While police were confident that Poderjay was heavily involved in the mystery, they expressed belief that Suzanne Fezzand, the French woman with whom Poderjay was living here had no connection with it.

Poderjay, it was revealed, was broke when arrested June 13 after his travels to New York and London—and two marriages.

Guns Salute President On Arrival for Regatta

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 21.—(AP.)—Greeted with booming salutes from guns of the Coast Guard station and four rolls of drums and four flourishes of bugles at the submarine base, President Roosevelt arrived here today for the annual Harvard-Yale regatta on the Thames tomorrow.

The President and his party cruised in Long Island Sound last night following the ceremonies at Yale yesterday when he received an honorary degree and told the alumni that the "brain trust" was in the government to stay. He came up the river on the naval yacht Sequola today and headed first for Red Top, Harvard crew headquarters.

The President's son, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., pulls the No. 6 oar in the Crimson freshman boat and provided the attraction that brings the nation's Chief Executive here for the first time since Theodore Roosevelt, also a Harvard man, saw the regatta in 1905.

The President headed a list of notables such as haven't graced the regatta in years.

Prof. Albert Einstein, of Princeton, was a guest aboard the auxiliary yacht Carol, guest of Felix Warburg, international banker. Ernst Hanfstaengl, aide to Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, who has been attending a class reunion at Harvard, also is expected here for the races.

(How brainy is the "brain trust?"—Read the Washington reaction to President Roosevelt's address on page 2.)

3 Saved as Motor Boat Hurtles Over River Dam

Swept over the dam at Lock No. 2, Aspinwall, into the Allegheny River early today, three men riding in a motor boat narrowly escaped death when they were hurled into the churning waters as the frail craft upset.

The three men were rescued by employes of the Vang Construction Company, building a new dam a quarter of a mile away.

Robert Baker, 23, of 6366 Frankstown avenue, son of an undertaker, owner of the boat, was picked up as he attempted to swim to shire. Suffering from exposure and brush burns about the body he was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

His companions were taken from the river as they clung to the side of the craft floating in the river 500 feet from the new dam. They were Albert Maxian, 26, of 4800 Forbes street, and William Hume, 17, Negro, of Blawnox. Maxian suffered a sprained ankle. Hume was uninjured.

Baker told police they were returning to Pittsburgh from visiting a camp near Blawnox. Nearing the dam, the boat lost its propeller. Out of control it was swept down the river and over the dam.

Cries of the men, as they were tossed into the swirling waters below the dam, attracted the attention of James Barrett, 24, of 707 Main street, Sharpsburg, and B. H. Leroy, of 2008 Main street, Sharpsburg. They set out in a motorboat and effected the rescues.

Taking the three men to the Pittsburgh shore, the drenched men were turned over to Raymond Contanni, 26, of 6925 Bishop street, and Frank Startiff, of 6723 Greenwood street, lock tenders at No. 2. They applied artificial respiration to Baker. Baker and his companions were taken to Pittsburgh Hospital by East Liberty police.

The boat is believed to have sunk.

FOES 'SEE RED' AS ROOSEVELT PRAISES 'BRAIN TRUST'

'50-YEAR PLAN' OF NEW DEAL UNDER FIRE

'College Boy Rulers' Sure to Be Issue In Campaign

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt's praise of the "brain trust" made some of his foes see "red" today.

There seemed no doubt that the men from the universities would be headlined as an issue as the campaigns for the fall elections rise to a crescendo.

Supporters, reading the speech in which the President accepted a degree from Yale yesterday, found between the lines a challenge.

It seemed to them to say:

"Bring on that issue!"

The path the New Deal is taking promised also to furnish powder for the big campaign guns on both sides.

A few hours after the President's New Haven speech, Ogden Mills spoke in New York, hitting the New Deal with the declaration that:

"A planned economy is surrender."

'HOW BRAINY IS IT?'

Judging from the comebacks here today, Republicans plan to pose the question:

"How brainy is that trust?"

Declared Senator Dickinson (Rep.), of Iowa:

"It will be one of the outstanding topics of the coming campaign. We are all for brains when they are leading us in the right direction, but against them when they take us the wrong way."

Senator Lewis (Dem.), of Illinois, said:

"I support the President's idea that the 'New Democracy' will do all it can to encourage young college men to come into politics and government; and, if consistent with their conscience, to come into the 'New Democracy.'"

The significance of his last remark was not lost, what with both parties out to corral young voters for the fall election.

Advisors of the President kept their own counsel. Not receptive to interviews, Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell was standing with Prof. Raymond Moley on the position that there isn't any "brain trust" any more.

PRESIDENT SPEAKS

It was during the 1932 campaign that they and Prof. A. A. Berle were principals of the group close to Mr. Roosevelt that were facetiously denominated "Brain Trusters." The term recurred repeatedly in Congress, without any notice from the administration.

But the President himself brought it up at New Haven. He said:

"While we have heard a certain amount of ribald laughter about the use of brains in government, it seems to be a good practice. It will be continued. We are going to call on trained people."

Senator McNary, the Republican leader, rejoined today:

"I think a little brains ought to go along with every administration. I like a 'Brain Trust' rather than a brainless one. There are a lot of fellows in the Senate brainier than Tugwell."

FIFTY-YEAR PLAN

Senator Schall (Rep.), of Minnesota, was reminded of what Lenin and Trotzky said when they Sovietized Russia. They first asserted "brains" would run the country, he said

"And later they announced they would embark on a 'five year plan.'"

"President Roosevelt is going the Russians 10 times better because he tells us through his Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Ickes, that he has a 50-year plan.

"The 'five-year plan' of the Russians failed just as the Roosevelt 'double deal' will fail."

His fears were not shared by Senator Bone (Dem.), of Washington. Since business prides itself in employing brilliant university men, he said, it is the wise thing for the government to do. He added:

"It's a startling and novel doctrine that a highly educated man in public office may become a menace. What the merits of some individual may be is a horse of another color."

The convention will close Saturday.

500 Young Reds, N. Y. Police Clash

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—Five hundred young persons, swinging fists and singing the "Internationale," clashed twice with police last night at Times square, heart of New York's theater zone.

Routed from Broadway, they swept down on the night court, where three of their number had been taken on disorderly conduct charges, and were again dispersed by police, using their nightsticks. The prisoners were held in bail for hearings today.

13th Ward Chairman Denies McNair Aid

James F. McGill, newly-elected Democratic chairman of the Thirteenth Ward, denied today that he had received the support of Mayor McNair in the committee election. He said:

"I do not know Mayor McNair and I did not attempt to interest him in my behalf. I do not believe that he was interested in my election one way or the other."

McGill had been reported as being a McNair candidate.

COX REQUESTS TAG DAY HELP

Leaving on his annual pilgrimage to Rome and Lourdes, France, Father James R. Cox, of Old St. Patrick's Church, made an urgent appeal for volunteer workers for tomorrow's tag day.

The purpose of the drive is to raise funds to send 100 children every day this summer from the poor district around Old St. Patrick's Church to the Calmwood swimming pool for an outing. The tag day receipts will be employed to pay for transportation and food for the youngsters.

All women disposed to assist Father Cox were requested to meet at the church tonight for instructions.

Father Cox had his first tag day last Friday, but, handicapped by a shortage of volunteer workers, it was not a success.

BROWN SLAYER GETS LIFE

MT. HOLLY, N. J., June 21.—(AP.)—The trial of Adam Scewczak, accused of slaying Bradway Brown, young printing executive, came to a sudden end today when the defendant changed his plea from not guilty to no defense and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

The change in plea was made shortly after Mrs. Edythe Pew, a woman juror, was notified of her husband's death and was excused from further service.

Defense attorneys were conferring with Scewczak over further progress of the trial, since it was up to him to decide whether he was willing to have the trial continue with 11 jurors.

Scewczak was the last of three suspects to plead nolo contendere in the slaying. They have not yet been sentenced.

Brown was shot down during an attempted robbery at his palatial Cinnaminson Township home on the evening of January 16, 1933.

STEEL LEADERS WEIGH UNION DEMANDS

Miss Perkins, Richberg Hopeful for Compromise

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(A.P.)—It was steel's move today in the negotiations to avert a strike.

Steel management has union labor's demands. The government awaited acceptance, denial or a counter-proposal. Donald Richberg, NRA counsel, said:

"There is no reason why a satisfactory adjustment can't be made."

Secretary Perkins, President Roosevelt's agent in dealings with both management and union labor, said, however, that so far there had been no comment from the employers on the union's proposal.

HOPE FOR HARMONY

Miss Perkins and her aides hope to work out a compromise satisfactory to both employers and the union from proposals each has submitted.

The Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the principal steel union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, threatened to call a strike unless given "recognition" in collective bargaining.

The union agreed, however, to postpone the strike indefinitely if a three-man neutral board were appointed to act on its grievances and to supervise elections to determine whether it should represent steel labor in dealing with management.

Management also suggested appointment of a three-man board to look into the men's grievances and to conduct elections. The employers made it clear, though, that they would insist upon minority representation in collective bargaining in case the union won the elections. Union labor so far has insisted that majorities rule.

DISCUSS PEACE PLANS

While the steel men considered the union demands, Miss Perkins arranged to see a delegation from the Steel and Metal Workers Union, so-called "left" group of workers. The date for the conference was not fixed.

During conferences yesterday, Miss Perkins, Richberg and Senator Wagner found time to discuss the setup of the new labor boards called for in the bill Congress passed just before adjournment.

'29 NOT 'FOOL'S PARADISE,' SURVEY SAYS

Falk Report Denies U. S. Over-Equipped For Production

America is not greatly overequipped to produce goods and services, according to one of the outstanding conclusions reached in a survey of the nation's economic system.

The survey was financed by the Maurice and Laura Falk Foundation of Pittsburgh at a cost of more than $125,000. The Foundation is attempting to find the maladjustments in the economic system which contribute to poverty.

TECHNOCRATS DISPUTED

The survey, conducted by the Brookings Institution, of Washington, refutes the claims of technocrats and other critics of America's economic development who have been stating that the country has been piling up a greatly excessive producing plant.

Another interesting finding of the survey was that in the prosperous period of 1925 to 1929 the plant capacity utilized was from 70 to 85 per cent. In this regard the report said:

"Certainly our findings do not bear out the contention of those who, in the midst of the present depression, say that we were living in a fool's paradise in 1929—that we were living beyond our means, and that disaster had to follow."

The analysis points out that there is room for considerable progress in closing the margin between productive capacity and utilized capacity and that gains in this direction would contribute substantially to raise the standard of living in this country.

The report states:

"The 20 per cent margin between productive capacity and utilized capacity represents, at 1929 prices, about $15,000,000,000 for additional national income. This amount would be adequate to give $125 to every man, woman and child in the country, to raise to $2,000 a year the income of 16,500,000 families who are now living below that level, or enough to increase all incomes below $3,500 a year by 42 per cent."

LOW INCOME GROUPS

The report contends that it is the low income groups that spend the largest share of their incomes for goods and services, and that any increase in their purchasing power would stimulate production and narrow the gap by which America fails to utilize her productive capacity.

In the summary of the report is raised this question:

"Did the margin of unutilized plant capacity in the several branches of industry expand during the period from 1900 to 1930?"

The answer from the fields of agriculture, mining (except for dislocations caused by the war) manufacturing and electric power utilities is negative, according to the report.

ATTORNEY IVORY DIES AT TRIAL

when he came to Carlyle to defend young Davis, extradited from Pittsburgh for the alleged shooting of Deputy Sheriff Henry Donnewald during a scuffle here several months ago.

Coroner B. J. Timmerman said he would conduct an inquest, but expressed the belief that the attorney had succumbed from a heart attack or stroke of apoplexy.

Ivory Attorney Here For Past 45 Years

Robert B. Ivory, whose sudden death occurred in Carlyle, Ill., today, had been a practicing attorney for 52 years and a member of the Pittsburgh Bar for the last 45 years.

He had participated in some of the principal criminal trials here, including the Munhall poison plot case and more recently the trial and acquittal of young Davis, who was tried here for the slaying of a state highway policeman before he was extradited to Illinois.

Mr. Ivory was born in Armstrong County 75 years ago last March and began the study of law in the offices of the late Judge James M. Galbreath, of Butler. He entered the private practice of law at Kittanning 52 years ago and seven years later came to Pittsburgh.

For the last few years Mr. Ivory had been associated with his son, Robert, Jr., with offices in the Grant Building.

The attorney leaves his second wife, Mrs. Irene Galbreath Ivory, daughter of the late Judge Galbreath; his son, Robert, and a daughter, Sarah Edith Ivory.

The body will be returned here for services.

Accuses Manager

JUNE DeLONG

ACTRESS TELLS OF REVELS

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—(AP.)—A transcript of grand jury testimony was made public today in which June DeLong, movie actress, said she and other girls virtually were forced to compromise themselves in order to get work through a film casting agency operated by Dave Allen, recently indicted with Gloria Marsh, another actress, on a morals charge. She was asked:

"Were you ever sent out on parties by producers, directors or actors?"

"No, only by Mr. Allen."

"Did you ever find that it was necessary to have affairs with other men to get a job in pictures?"

"Oh, yes, that's about the only way you can get work."

"Did you ever hear of Mr. Allen having affairs with other women?"

"Oh, yes, hundreds of them."

Miss DeLong testified Allen accused her of "framing" him when a woman friend came unexpectedly to Miss DeLong's apartment, where, the actress said, a revel was in progress.

Both Allen and Miss Marsh have denied Miss DeLong's statements. At the time of his indictment, Allen said it was a "diabolical plot" to have him removed from the management of the central casting bureau. He resigned from that post recently.

Mrs. Corbin was informed today that Mrs. Kroll landed from a liner at New York June 4 with her son, Philip Kroll, 18 months of age.

INDIANAPOLIS, June 21.—(AP.)—Caroline Ruby Mercer, born a month ago with some 50 bone fractures, today was free from the wooden framework which had given her support to prevent further breaks, and was resting on a pillow.

Physicians said X-ray pictures of the baby showed that most of the fractured bones are knit together again. Her mother, Mrs. Hansel Mercer, said the baby's left side, which was caved in at birth, is resuming its normal shape.

U. P. UNION FOES ELECT DR. ORR MODERATOR

Merger Opponents Ask Assembly to Keep Identity

OXFORD, O., June 21.—(AP.)—Memorials importuning the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church in North America to vote against union with the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. poured in on the assembly today.

The assembly—a parliament of representatives of the 67 presbyteries of the church—as to vote whether to submit to the presbyteries a plan of union already approved by the Presbyterian Church.

Pleas asking for defeat of the union came from two presbyteries and five congregations their delegates representing 10,000 of the approximately 250,000 communicants of the church. The presbyteries are Lake, in Northwestern Pennsylvania, and Hudson, in New York and New Jersey. The congregations submitting memorials were of Elizabeth, Pa.; Jamestown, O.; Alliance, O.; Sewickley, Pa., and Ambridge, Pa.

All asked that negotiations for union be discontinued, and the church's committee on Presbyterian unity be dismissed.

Presentation of the memorials came at the first session presided over by the Rev. J. Alvin Orr, of Pittsburgh, newly elected moderator and an opponent of the plan of union.

The session saw, as well, the election of Dr. F. Scott McBride, of Washington, national superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, as vise moderator.

Defeated for the office of moderator of the assembly last night, Dr. McBride was nominaed for vice moderator by Dr. C. P. Proudfit, of Combridge, O., who had seconded the nomination of Mr. Orr. Election was accompanied by adoption of a resolution expressing "confidence in the Anti-Saloon League" and "its distinguished head."

TWO TO TESTIFY AGAINST GANG

Two Homewood district youths, said by witnesses to be sons of honest, industrious parents, told Judge W. Heber Dithrich, in Criminal Court, that they would testify for the state at the trial of four other members of a gang responsible for more than 40 robberies in Brushton and Homewood.

The Judge suspended sentence on them until the others are tried in the fall, meanwhile committing them to the custody of their attorneys.

Theodore Elginfritz, 21, of Hamilton avenue, and Harry Saunders, 18, of McPherson boulevard, pleaded no defense to 23 charges of entering buildings and larceny in chain stores and beer gardens, where money and cigarets were the principal articles taken.

Both said they had helped the other members of the gang in its operations because of the easy money and because they had no work.

Besides the other four alleged robbers, two storekeepers have been charged with receiving stolen goods and are alleged to have been the "fences" of the gang. The youths said they would take goods to these stores any time between 2 and 5 a. m. and that the storekeepers would buy them.

A few hours later the trio was arrested. The three are Iemar Blackmon, 23, operator of the County Office Building shotshine concession, and Seymour Hardwick, 21, and Fred Milner, 22, his assistants.

Roosevelt Order Ousts Service Code Officials

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP.)—NRA has received resignations from three service code authorities and officials look for five more to result from President Roosevelt's executive order suspending fair practice sections of service industry codes.

Authorities for the cleaners and dyers, the laundry and the motor vehicle storage part trade codes have resigned. The other service industries whose resignations are expected include the barber shop trade, the bowling and billiard trade, the shoe rebuilding trade, the advertising distribution trade and the advertising display installation trade.

NRA officials said the executive order by eliminating the trade practice sections of service codes, including price fixing provisions, in effect abolished code authorities and that resignations now being received were regarded as routine.

The explanation was made after the code authority for the cleaning and dying industry had written President Roosevelt, charging bad faith by Hugh S. Johnson in his suspension of the price control clause without notice for hearing. The letter said 97 per cent of the plant owners and retail outlets wanted to comply with the trade practice provisions, which they contended had eliminated racketeering.

Thorne Smith, 42, Dies; 'America's Rabelais'

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—Thorne Smith, 42, novelist, died suddenly of a heart attack last night at Sarasota, Fla.

He was on a vacation in Florida with his wife, the former Celia Sullivan, and two daughters, Mary and June.

Among his books are "Night Life of the Gods," "Topper" and "Rain in the Doorway." His home was in Greenwich Village, where he was known as "the American Rabelais."

Smith was born in Annapolis, Md. His father, Commodore James Thorne Smith, was supervisor of the Port of New York during the war.

After attending Dartmouth College, Smith entered the advertising field. He joined the Navy during the war and edited the Navy magazine, "Broadside."

Smith delighted equally in the American scene and in puncturing puffed-up institutional activities.

His "The Bishop's Jaegers" and "Topper Takes a Trip" were also best sellers, which took him to Hollywood to write movie scenarios.

U. S. TO PROSECUTE TRIO HELD IN PLOT ON RICH WIDOW

SLEUTHS BARE EXTORTION LETTERS

Decoy Money Trapped Suspects in Threats On Mrs. Beegle

Three men were held in the county jail today for an alleged $10,000 extortion plot against Mrs. Nellie E. Beegle, wealthy resident of Patterson Heights, Beaver Falls, threatening death or kidnaping to some member of her family.

The three suspects are Richard Thomas, 36; James E. Harrington, 21, and Kenneth Weir, 20, all of Beaver Falls.

At a preliminary hearing before the United States Commissioner today $10,000 bond was set for Thomas, $5,000 bond for Harrington and $2,500 bond for Weir.

The government considers Thomas the ringleader in the case.

HEARING DATE SET

A hearing before the commissioner was set for next Thursday.

Attorney James Philip O'Connor volunteered to represent Weir. He made a plea that Weir's bond be made as light as possible because Weir's wife is ill.

After the bond was announced, Thomas joined in the plea for Weir. He said that "Weir had nothing to do with it."

Mrs. Beegle, socially prominent widow of F. N. Beegle, former president of the Union Drawn Steel Company, and mother of C. H. Beegle, banker and manufacturer, was warned in the letter she was "on the spot" and unless she complied with the demand some member of her family would disappear or die suddenly. She was warned not to tell the "law."

Enclosed with the death threatening note was a page torn from a detective story magazine, bearing the caption:

"So you notified the police, eh! O. K. We fix."

Mrs. Beegle since returning from Florida a month ago has been under the care of a physician and the threatening letter, written in hand printed block type, was intercepted by her son. He notified Corp. J. F. Schmidt of the State Police, who in turn reported the matter to James J. Waters, head of the government investigators in this district. Together they planned the trap for capture of the writer.

DECOY MONEY USED

Carrying out the instructions in the letter the authorities left a decoy package of money at a designated building in Rochester and for three days kept the place under guard.

Late Tuesday Harrington was said to have called and asked for a package addressed to L. K. Evans, under which name the package was to be addressed.

When he left with the fake package he was observed getting into an automobile and two machines filled with government investigators and state police followed it.

When the driver in the machine with Harrington saw he was being pursued he drove at a high rate of speed to the Bridgewater-Rochester Bridge, where the officers drew guns and ordered them to stop. When they refused to obey, one of the government mens' car crowded it to the side of the bridge and forced it to stop.

Thomas, said to have been the driver of the car, and Harrington, were placed under arrest and the fake bundle of money recovered. They were taken to the Beaver County Jail, where they were said to have implicated Weir, and his arrest followed.

Two letters were received. One, dated June 16, with a Beaver Falls postmark, read:

"Dear Mrs. Beegle—This is to notify you that you are on the spot. You have a son and he has a family. If some of you don't want to die quick, follow instructions. Get $10,000 in five, ten and twenty dollar bills—unmarked. If you don't do as told and follow instructions some of your family will disappear or die suddenly. Don't be foolish and notify the law because you met get one of us, but some of the gang will get you."

HUNT FOR PAIR LOST ON LAKE

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP.)—A privately chartered airplane aided coast guardsmen from three stations today in a search for Raymond Gustafson, 24, and Miss Ruth Hatch, 25, who failed to return last night from a sailboat trip.

Gustafson and the young woman, who is a Northwestern University student living at his home, set out in Lake Michigan from Belmont harbor in an 18-foot sailboat owned by Gustafson. The two have frequently taken boat trips together and were said to be good swimmers and sailors.

When the pair failed to return, the young man's mother, Mrs. Walter T. Gustafson, fearing the slight craft may have met disaster in the gale which swept the lake shortly after midnight, appealed to the Coast Guard. Later she employed a commercial pilot to aid in the search.

BANKER BARRY LOSES JOB, DIES

Convicted Relative Of Schwab Faced U. S. Trial Here

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 21.—David Barry, convicted banker and brother-in-law of Charles M. Schwab, steel magnate, died unexpectedly early today a few hours after he had been deposed as president of the Climax Fire Brick Company.

Barry, president of two closed banks—the First National and Title, Trust and Guarantee Company—had been convicted only last Friday on a charge of making false entries in the bank's books.

Dr. John McAneny, Barry's physician, attributed the banker's death to a heart attack induced by acute indigestion.

The banker died, however, before the physician reached him, and Coroner Cyrus Davis made an investigation before he decided an inquest would not be necessary. Barry had been ailing since Sunday.

Informed of his brother-in-law's death, Mr. Schwab prepared to leave New York at once for Johnstown.

OUSTED BY BANK

Barry was to have attended the annual stockholders' meeting of the Fire Brick Company yesterday but sent his son, David, Jr., in his stead.

A group of shareholders headed by Attorney Philip Shettig, counsel for the receiver of the closed First National Bank, voted to oust Barry as president of the company and elected Richard P. Haws, of New York, to succeed the convicted banker.

Barry had been named in suits instituted by John Vallely, receiver of the bank, to recover on loans on which Barry had pledged stock of the brick company as collateral.

Barry had been one of the leading bankers and business men of Johnstown, his birthplace, and his sudden death shocked the community.

SECOND TO DIE

Mrs. Gertrude Schwab Barry, his wife and sister of the steel magnate, told Dr. McAneny that she had been summoned to her husband at 1:30 a. m. She quoted the banker as saying:

"I feel like I'm smothering."

Then, she said, he lapsed into unconsciousness and died before the doctor arrived.

Barry is the second former official of the closed banks to meet death.

Charles McGahan, assistant cashier of the First National, shot himself to death in the basement of the bank last January.

Jacob Murdock, vice president of the bank, indicted with Barry, narrowly escaped death a few months ago in an automobile crash at Windber. He is still in a critical condition and was unable to face trial with Barry last week.

FACED TRIAL HERE

Murdock and Barry, along with two other officers of the First National, face trial in Federal Court in Pittsburgh on charges of misapplication of $200,000 of the bank's funds.

Barry had been convicted on charges that funds of the Johnstown schools had been transferred from First National banks to the Title and Trust without authority.

Barry, who was 68, had worked himself up from a minor clerkship in the Cambria Iron Company to the presidency of the city's principal financial houses. He had been active in state and national banking affairs.

Mrs. Barry and eight children survive.

NUDIST IN JAIL, WIFE PAROLED

ALLEGAN, Mich., June 21.—(AP.)—Mrs. Fred C. Ring, whose husband, proprietor of a nudist camp, is serving a jail sentence for indecent exposure, was on probation today, following a plea of guilty to the same charge.

Circuit Judge Fred T. Miles granted clemency after Besse M. Garner, counsel for Mrs. Ring, had said she saw no purpose in fighting the case although she considered the statute unfair.

The charges were preferred against Mr. and Mrs. Ring after sheriff's officers had raided their Sunshine Sports League camp last Labor Day. The camp was reopened this spring but Ring said the colonists were wearing trunks, in deference to the law.

Ring's conviction was upheld recently by the State Supreme Court and he surrendered to start his jail sentence.

Bremer Kidnap Trial Slated in November

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 21.—(INS.)—Trial of John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, former Chicago political leader, and two others charged with conspiracy in the $200,000 ransom kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer today was scheduled for November.

Federal Judge M. M. Joyce scaled down the bond of McLaughlin and the other two, William E. Vidler and Philip J. Delaney, from $100,000 to $30,000 each.

Nudist Colonists Sued for $527 Laundry Bill

SAN JOSE, Cal., June 21.—(AP.)—Nudist colonies do have laundry bills.

Just what it is nudists send to the laundry, the bill did not disclose.

SUICIDE EFFORT OF STAR TOLD

International Newsreel.

LOS ANGELES, June 21.—Lucy Doraine, film actress, once slashed her wrists in an alleged suicide attempt because of the asserted ill treatment accorded her by her husband, Joran von Dietz, chemist, it was revealed in Superior Court here.

Esther Chiolo, a friend of the actress, testifying in support of Miss Doraine's plea for a divorce, which was granted, said that upon one occasion she found Miss Doraine lying on a couch in her home with her wrists bleeding from two large cuts.

Miss Doraine, former wife of Michael Curtiz, film director, testified Von Dietz treated her cruelly during their married life.

WITNESS TELLS OF MILLEN TRAP

DEDHAM, Mass., June 21.—(AP.)—Saul Messinger, of Brooklyn, N. Y., today, at the trial of Norma Millen, told how he betrayed her husband to the police, but refused to collect in the defense contention that Murton Millen was domineering.

Messinger, known as "buddy" to Millen, his former friend, was subjected to a scorching cross examination by the defense attorney.

Norma is charged with being an accessory after the fact of murder and robbery. Her husband, his brother, Irving, and Abraham Faber were convicted on June 8 of the slaying of a policeman in the robbery of the Needham Trust Company.

Obviously embarrassed, Messinger told of leading police to a hotel lobby where he had a date with Murton and where Murton and Irving were arrested. He said he once got money from Murton but he insisted on calling it a "loan."

Norma sat, head down, in a dejected attitude, as the questioning progressed.

SHERADEN MAN WINS BALM SUIT

A jury in Judge Elder W. Marshall's court today awarded an $18,000 verdict to R. R. Ward, of Sheraden, in his alienation of affections suit against R. B. Clifford, a business partner.

Ward accused Clifford of alienating the affections of Mrs. Pauline Thompson Ward. He had sued for $25,000 balm.

Ward claimed that he had met Clifford one night at a dance, struck up an acquaintance with him and finally had invited him to become his partner in a rabbit business at 2960 Merwin avenue.

Clifford then came to live at the Ward home, Ward said. He testified that Mrs. Ward and Clifford made several automobile trips together and on one of these stayed away three days.

Since April 18, 1932, according to Ward, his wife has lived at the home of her mother at 2957 Merwin avenue and Clifford has stayed there, too. Clifford did not defend the suit.

SOCIETY GA GA, ASTOR WEDDING DOING IT

Family Tree, Gillespie Forte Just Little Too 'Vex-Making'

By DIXIE TIGHE
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Wanted: One gynecologist and a Hollywood hostess to complete arrangements for the Astor-French wedding.

Society, my cuckoos, has such a well coiffured headache from trying to find out what relation Enzo Fiermonte, boxer-husband of Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor Dick Fiermonte, will be to Ellen French when she becomes the bride of John Jacob Astor III, whose half-brother, Vincent Astor, was to have been the best man at the wedding of the former Mrs. Dick's son to Eileen Gillespie, whose grandmother, Mrs. Sherman Watts, lives four doors away from where Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor III will make their summer house.

SMALL 'STUFF' IN WEST

Indeed, society is finding it all just too, too vex-making and would be glad to swap several lorgnettes and six shooting sticks for a little of Hollywood's savoir faire. Why, in Hollywood, the Astor-French wedding would call for no more than a buffet supper and a Gypsy band. But in Newport they haven't had enough experience with the "divorce and be friends society" to know just what to do.

The Astor family tree has spread itself out from one conservative, highly prized tree into a family forest. Some of the roots are still deep in the social register and some of the roots were yanked right out. A synoanalyst would probably get sap-poisoning before he was through weaving around the new branches.

THEN THERE'S THE PUGILIST

It was all mad-making enough when Mrs. Madeleine Force Astor Dick married Enzo Fiermonte, young Italian pugilist, making him stepfather to two sets of her children and a prospective stepfather-in-law to independent little Eileen Gillespie, who threw the foreign alliance into a bowl of minestrone when she broke her engagement to young Astor.

The proud old Gillespie family has decided to do just as it pleases and, if Newport doesn't like it, all the objectors can find themselves a new resort before the Gillespies will change their plans—their forte is changing the Astors' plans and they are not going into reverse.

"WE MAY, MAY NOT!"

Quite finally Mrs. Gillespie informed International News Service today:

"Oh, yes, we may be in Newport at the time of the Astor wedding, or, we may not. It all depends on our plans. We expect to sail for Europe the end of this month and it is perfectly possible we may go to Newport before then. It is also possible we may not."

Although the R. S. V. P. of the Gillespies remains in that unsettled state, there still remains a very fantastic lineup on the attendance of the French-Astor wedding. Reading from first to last, it goes like this:

NEW "MAMMA" TO BE THERE

Ellen (Tucky) French will be given in marriage by her father, Francis French, now divorced from her mother, and who is bringing along the new Mrs. French. Making the French family just about tops for comiess.

The bridegroom's stepfather, Enzo Fiermonte, will likely break training to attend. Mrs. Fiermonte will attend her son's wedding, taking along for the ceremony her two sons by her marriage to William Dick, young William and John Henry Dick. Another son, Vincent Astor, is sailing for foreign shores to escape social entanglements which might result if J. J. A. III wanted his half-brother to be best man on the re-take.

STEEL FOUNDER DIES ON TRIP

Robert D. Campbell, 65, one of the organizers of the Allegheny Steel Company, died unexpectedly today at Orillia, Canada, where he was on a vacation.

At the time of his death he was senior vice president and a director of the steel firm. He also was a director of the Reliance Life Insurance Company and of the Farmers Deposit National Bank.

Mr. Campbell leaves his wife and one daughter, Mary Elizabeth Campbell.

Mrs. Campbell left for Canada today to bring her husband's body to their Pittsburgh residence at 1345 Inverness street.

JAMES E. HARRINGTON, 20 JOSEPH JACKSON F. A. MORRIS

Deputy Goldman with two Beaver aides and the three men—Harrington, Weir and Thomas—trapped in the attempted extortion of $10,000 from wealthy, ill Mrs. F. N. Beegle, Beaver Valley society leader. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Guard Heiress-Actress From Death Threats

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, June 21.—Hollywood tightened its guard today against underworld threats in the wake of two suspected extortion letters directed against Hazel Forbes, pretty movie actress and heiress.

The letters, however, were believed by both Miss Forbes and police to be the work of cranks. One demanded $5,000 and the other $2,500. Nothing further has been heard from the extortionists since the original notes, which threatened Miss Forbes with death unless the money was paid.

Many prominent residents of the film colony have private guards which have been constantly in evidence for many months because of the fear of ruthless crooks.

Harold Lloyd keeps a close watch over his children behind the high walls of his estate and Marlene Dietrich has a guard always near her daughter.

Miss Forbes, although not hiring any outside aid, remained close to her apartment for several days after receiving the threatening letters. She recently departed for the East.

Summer Headed Here Along With Heat Wave

The sun ends its annual northbound swing at 10:48 tonight, Pittsburgh time, which means that summer and the longest day of the year are arriving in a dead heat.

And "heat" is the choicest word, the outlook being for one of the hottest days of the year throughout the Middle West.

Spring's final fling yesterday saw temperatures as high as 102 in Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri, 99 in Chicago and nearly 90 in Pittsburgh.

Although the farm belt received beneficial showers a few days ago, experts believed the damage from the long dry spell has been irreparable in many sections.

Maj. W. D. Styer, Army engineer, however, has expressed confidence that shipping in the Pittsburgh area will not suffer from the drought. He has advised navigation interests that dams on the Ohio, Allegheny and Monongahela rivers are being equipped with flashboards and other devices to preserve sufficient water for municipal and factory uses.

BUILD BURNER, GET O. K. LATER, MOYER URGES

Health Director Ray P. Moyer has discovered a method of avoiding delay in the incinerator construction programs.

He has suggested in a letter to Council that since the county has no jurisdiction over rubbish burners, the city go ahead with the construction of rubbish incinerators suitable also for garbage disposal but not used for that purpose until so approved by County Commissioners.

Director Moyer pointed out that Council must act soon if incinerators are to be ready by January 1, 1934.

Council yesterday was flooded with protests from residents of the Manchester and East End district against the proposed sites at Chatham and Reedsdale streets and Brilliant pumping station.

SPEAKERS MILITANT

A number of the speakers were militant in their demands on Council to take the incinerators out of the city.

Although assured by city officials that the firms who build the incinerators will put up bonds to insure there will be no odors or nuisance and that the gathering equipment will be of a modern closed type, a crowd which packed Council chamber roared its disapproval.

Council is apparently wavering on incinerator construction, but it is believed that a majority is still ready to go through with some plan that will eliminate the old contract system.

The argument in Council yesterday was intense and punctuated with cheers and applause. Even the county's voting machine purchase was brought into the controversy to illustrate the point that the word of a salesman cannot always be trusted.

COUNCIL WARNED

The Rev. C. L. Daugherty, of Trinity Mehodist Protestant Church, North Side, opposed the incinerator. He said:

"A rose by any other name might be as sweet, but a garbage can is a garbage can, call it what you please. They say these plants will be all right. You might be able to get somebody to say you can run an ice plant in hell, if you want to."

Representatives of several incinerator manufacturing companies spoke, but spokesmen of the delegations warned Council against "high pressure salesmen."

The speakers against the plants included John A. Dalzell, representing residents of the Highland district; Albert J. Eber, North Side Board of Trade; C. E. Wise, Crucible Steel Company; W. W. Stoner, Manchester Bank; Mrs. O. J. Haller, Congress of Clubs; W. Clyde Grubbs, East Liberty Chamber of Commerce; the Rev. Dr. J. A. Kelso, Western Theological Seminary; Mrs. John H. Phillips, former Councilman Harry A. Little, Paul H. Dillman, Adam Hoffman, Attorney Horton Smith, Miss Carrie Bishop, Mrs. Florence Manning and Miss Katherine H. Marion.

COURT GRANTS 25 DIVORCES

Divorces have been granted to Mary Wrigley from Donald Wrigley, Andrew McCloy from Mary Ann McCloy, Catherine M. Spinnenweber from Jacob A. Spinnenweber, Elsie M. Seifert from Julius J. Seifert, Lucy Leah from Clyde E. Leah, Leona T. Wilson from Frank E. Wilson, Adele Israel from Philip Israel, Josephine Stemplewski from Walter Stemplewski, Emma Nolte Bodman from Anthony Bodman, Bessie L. Schwartz from Samuel W. Farley Hopes to End Postoffice Deficit

STROUDSBURG, Pa., June 21.—(AP.)—Postmaster General Farley today said he hopes to wipe out the Postoffice Department's huge deficit during the fiscal year of 1934—a feat accomplished only seven times since 1890.

Through "systematic, business-like" administration the postal head declared at dedication of Stroudsburg's new Federal Building, he plans to end his first full year in office with the books completely balanced.

Racing Sunday

HELEN MacCLOSKEY

WOMEN FLIERS RACE SUNDAY

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—Two score of the nation's best feminine pilots will compete in the third annual Annette Gipson all-women air race at Roosevelt Field Sunday.

Amelia Earhart Putnam will be the starter and Ruth Nichols the chief scorer.

Fifteen pilots from the "powder puff" air brigade had entered the race tonight, and at least 25 more are expected by Sunday. Society women who have taken up flying as a hobby as well as the professional women pilots will be in the race, which is for a prize of $850, over a 30-mile course.

Among those entered are Helen MacCloskey, of Pittsburgh, and Edna M. Gardner, a nurse of the Naval Hospital, Washington.

MOYER PROBES LEECH FARM

Dr. Ray P. Moyer, director of the city health department, today announced that he had begun an investigation of charges of thievery, drunkenness and fighting made against employes of the city tuberculosis hospital at Leech Farm.

Director Moyer acted following the filing of accusations with him. He intimated that there would be a shakeup of the personnel if the charges are bourne out.

Moyer appointed a committee to conduct the investigation. Members are Mrs. Ehrenfeld, Dr. R. H. Harrison and Dr. Brown Fulton. He didn't know Mrs. Ehrenfeld's first name nor who she is.

In a letter to Dr. J. Shilen, superintendent of the hospital, the Director of Health declared that he was acting to determine the truthfulness of the charges.

SHRINE MEET NEARS END

MINNEAPOLIS, June 21.—(AP.)—Nobles of the Mystic Shrine of North America will end their sixtieth annual convention tonight in a brilliant electrical pageant.

Succeeding to the office of imperial potentate, Dana S. Williams, Lewiston, Me., Tuesday replaced John N. Sebrell, Norfolk, Va., whose term expired this year. Washington, was named host to the 1935 convention, dates for which will be set later.

Workers Near Goal In Jewish Drive

With subscriptions totalling $92,000 toward the goal of $100,000, all workers in the United Jewish Appeal for German Relief will meet tonight in the Y. M. and W. H. A. auditorium to make reports. The campaign is scheduled to close on Monday.

WORK ON ARENA SET TO START, COUNCIL TOLD

The construction of a $2,000,000 auditorium on the site of Motor Square Garden is scheduled to start next week, according to an announcement to City Council by Attorney J. P. Callahan.

It will be an auditorium seating from 14,000 to 17,000 persons and will be available for conventions of national importance.

The building is financed by the Mellon interests who own the land, according to Attorney Callahan.

He pointed out one possibility of blocking the building. If City Council were to grant a lease to the Greater Pittsburgh Exposition Society for the Point property, he declared it would set up unfair competition. He said:

'CAN'T SUPPORT TWO'

"There isn't any large city that can support two arenas."

The new Motor Square Garden Building would be 287x276 feet, as large as the Chicago Stadium, he asserted, and would be chiefly used for hockey and prize fights.

P. H. Chamberlain, manager for the Exposition Society, argued to Council that the Exposition Building would not interfere with the Motor Square Garden structure.

LEASE HELD UP

The Exposition lease had been laid over in Council as it approached final passage in order to hear about the new plan.

Frederick Bigger, chairman of the City Planning Commission, told Council that the construction of a new exposition building at the Point would definitely block the proposed water front boulevards. He illustrated his remarks with a model of the improvement proposed at the Point.

VOTE MYSTERY IN 3 NAMES

Habbeez, Edris and Campbell—three names—had Registration Commissioner Jacob Frank slightly confused today.

Records revealed that William Campbell and M. Habbeez had registered before the primary, giving the address of 1 Sweeney court.

But only one man lives at 1 Sweeney court, a recent street list checkup showed.

And that man, a Negro, summoned before the commissioner yesterday, admitetd he had two names. One of them, under which he said he registered, was William Campbell. But the other, he said, was not Habbeez, but Mohammed Edris, which does not appear on the registration list.

And while no vote was cast under the name of Campbell, and Campbell—or Edris, his Mohammedan name, he explained—said he had not voted, a ballot had been cast under the name of M. Habbeez.

Who was Habbeez? Nobody seemed to know.

SETTLE SUIT OVER POTION

Dorothy A. Smart, Margrave street, yesterday was given a consent verdict of $2,000 for injuries sustained when she drank medicine from a bottle filled by the Royal Manufacturing Company, of Duquesne. Miss Smart is a niece of Myrtle L. King, who with her husband last week won verdicts for $10.00 each against the same company. Both drank some of the medicine from the same bottle marked "Essence of Peppermint" which, it is claimed, was carbolic acid.

3 Rob Man of Watch In North Side Park

Three men robbed John Lesch, 41, of 911 Constance street, of a watch and $1.55 as he walked in East Park, near Cedar avenue early today, Lesch reported to police.

TILLY LOSCH

DENIES 'LOUSY' IS SWEAR WORD

International News Service.

LONDON, June 21.—Tilly Losch, nimble-footed Hungarian dancer, gave the divorce court a definition of profantity today during the trial of the suit brought against her by Edward F. W. James.

James named Prince Serge Obolensky, who also testified today, as corespondent.

Norman Birkett, attorney for James, cross-questioned Tilly at length regarding her alleged use of improper language.

Tilly admitted she had used the words "lousy" and "rat".

Such "verminous terms", she told the court were not regarded as profane in America.

Prince Obolensky, brother-in-law of Vincent Astor, placed his relationship with the glamorous dancer on a strictly platonic basis. He met her at various times in New York, he said, solely to enlist her aid to bring about a reconciliation with his estranged wife, the former Alice Astor.

C. F. Anderson, Civic Leader, Found Dead

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., June 21.—(AP.)—Charles F. Anderson, 53, widely known in Central Pennsylvania as a civic leader, was found dead in bed today. Anderson was formerly president of the Altoona Chamber of Commerce and the Altoona Rotary Club. He was president of the Anderson Paper and Twine Company of Altoona. The body was discovered by Mrs. Anderson. Anderson had been in ill health for about two months. He is survived by his wife and three children.

Pittsburgh Academy Holds Annual Dance

Pittsburgh Academy's annual dance in honor of the graduating class will take place at the Pines tonight, sponsored by the Alumni Association under the chairmanship of Miss Dorothy McMillin. Miss Margaret Dittmar is secretary of the association.

MAYOR IN VETO JIBES UNIONS, PLUMBERS

Mayor McNair has vetoed an ordinance which would require improved plumbing facilities in beverage dispensaries, restaurants and other public gathering places.

The Mayor in a veto message to Council declares that the reason that there is so little building in Pittsburgh is because of difficulties placed in the way of persons wanting to make the improvement. He said:

"It appears to me that those who are engaged in the plumbing business probably started the movement from which this ordinance developed by reason of the fact a great deal of extra work will immediately come to the persons engaged in that line of business."

He added that Council should not add to the burdens of business and should rely on force of public opinion to keep restaurants sanitary.

The Mayor also criticized the building trades for maintaining "ridiculously high prices" for labor instead of allowing wages to be fixed by law of supply and demand.

The plumbing ordinance was introduced by Councilman Charles Anderson.

CITY MAY ISSUE NEW BONDS

Council is considering an issue of $1,500,000 in bonds to pay for urgent improvements to streets and water lines.

The bonds would be charged against Councilmanic borrowing power.

One of the principal items is the electrification of the Squirrel Hill Pumping Station to improve water pressure in the higher sections of the Fourteenth Ward.

Repaving of Liberty avenue from Twenty-first to Thirty-second streets is planned, along with similar work in Forbes street, Sixth avenue and Hooper street.

Bridge repairs, including a new floor for the Manchester Bridge and for sections of the Boulevard of the Allies, are contemplated.

A conference regarding the needs of the City Home and Hospital at Mayview is also to be held today and a new building, to relieve overcrowding there, may require a separate bond issue.

GAMBLING RAID TRAPS MAN AS 'BOOKIE'

John Conway, 53, seized as the manager of a bureau that furnishes information on racing, today was granted a continuation of his hearing when he was arraigned before Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Central Police Court.

Conway, charged with being a common gambler, bookmaking and conspiracy, is out on $2,500 bond.

Detective Inspector Sam Wheeler, who arrested Conway yesterday in a raid on a three-room suite of offices on the ninth floor of the House Building, testified that the eletype and telegraph machines in the place had a value of approximately $25,000. He said that the rooms were elaborately furnished.

'NEWS BUREAU'

Wheeler said the offices were under the name of the General News Bureau, Inc. He declared that they distributed information on racing throughout the Pittsburgh district, West Virginia and Eastern Ohio.

Attorney Louis Little, counsel for Conway, contended that the business was a legitimate one.

Wheeler said that when he arrested Conway he found in his pocket a notebook containing the names and telephone numbers of a list of Pittsburgh businessmen and politicians.

MAYOR SCORES BOOZE TAX

His honor the Mayor today had reminded Twelfth Ward Italians of the leniency he shows them—and presumably others—when he presides on the magistrate's bench.

The Mayor, speaking to a meeting in Larimer School, was criticizing one of his pet targets, the tax on booze, when he pointed out:

"I'm not very hard on you when you do make your own when I sit on the magistrate's bench. It just keeps that much more tax here in Pittsburgh."

Today his honor explained that he was referring to home-made wine; that, anyhow, he was just joking.

The Mayor criticized the proposed tax on the Liberty Tubes—which was the purpose of the meeting—and failed to surprise his listeners by praising the single tax.

Two Held as Postal Theft Suspects

Two Negroes are being held today by federal authorities awaiting a hearing before the United States Commissioner on a charge of breaking and entering the Sharpsburg postoffice last Thursday.

They are Eddie Mitchell, 27, of Benson way, Sharpsburg, and Leo Trent, 22, 6627 Butler street. Complaint against the pair was filed by D. H. Stephens, postoffice inspector.

Resume Work Upon Mines Building Soon

Early resumption of work on the $100,000 addition to the United States Bureau of Mines, Forbes street, tied up for some time by labor trouble, was foreseen today as a result of a conference between Miss Emmeline Pitt, local United States Labor Department representative; William P. Yant, bureau superintendent, and representatives of contractors. Only the manner in which workmen are to be procured remains to be settled, it was announced.

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH WANT-ADS BRING RESULTS

STATES DRIVE TO REDUCE COUNTIES

Throughout the United States today there are moves being made to simplify the governments by consolidation of small tax levying bodies, by eliminating duplication and in general, doing away with the waste of duplicated effort.

In nearly half of the 48 states campaigns have been started for reduction in the number of counties. In New Jersey a legislative commission is at present studying the question of county consolidation.

County consolidation on statewide basis has been proposed for the following states, according to a recent report issued by the National Municipal League: Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Tennessee, Texas, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Wyoming and Mississippi.

LESS 'GOVERNMENTS'

Angelo J. Rossi, Mayor of San Francisco, in a recent radio address declared that we should not have less government, but less governments. He declared that in the matter of separate, overlapping and duplicated units, the Roman Empire of ancient times was not as highly and expensively organized as is the United States today. He further pointed out that the British Empire of today does not possess as many separate pieces of governmental machinery as we do.

Consolidation of many of our smaller counties in Pennsylvania has been urged from time to time. Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for Governor, recently said that immediate steps should be taken to consolidate our smaller counties. At present in Pennsylvania there are 12 counties with populations less than 25,000.

LEADERS HOPEFUL

State Treasurer Charles A. Waters also has come out and made known his stand on consolidation of counties. Mr. Schnader and Mr. Waters have received the support of scores of outstanding students of governmental operation who favor less governments.

Civic leaders and students of government who are attempting to bring about a constitutional convention in Pennsylvania, are doing so with the hope that county consolidation will be one of the important matters to be acted upon in the looked for convention.

PA. SCHOOLING COSTS DROP 10 PER CENT

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, June 21.—The cost of educating a pupil in Pennsylvania's schools was about 10 per cent less in 1933 than it was in 1932, according to a statistical survey of school finances made public by the Department of Public Instruction.

The survey showed the average expenditure for education each of the state's 1,777,503 pupils in 1933 was $77.10 as compared with $85.73 for each of the 1,735,563 pupils in 1932.

It was considered significant that while the total expended for instruction in 1933 was 9.1 per cent less than that of 1932 the proportion of the school dollar spent for this item was one per cent higher.

TOTAL EXPENDITURES

In 1933 the cost of instruction totaled 75.4 cents out of every dollar as compared with 74.6 cents in 1932. Commenting on this proportional rise, Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction, said:

"In the last analysis, it is the amount spent for instruction which marks the value of public instruction."

Every category of expenditures except tuition payments decreased in 19.3 although the number of pupils increased by almost 42,000.

The grand total of expenditures by school districts in 1933 was $181,609,097, of which amount $137,039,068 was for operating expenses, as compared with $204,494,511 and $148,792,253, respectively, for 1932.

In dollars and cents the total spent for instruction dropped from $1,021,944 or $63,97 per pupil in 1932 to $103,283,359 or $58.11 per pupil in 1933 although the proportion per dollar spent for this item was greater. Dr. Rule said:

"Larger classes per teacher and the elimination of many kindergartens and parts of vocational courses of study resulted from this reduction in expenditure for education. Figures show that the schools had about 1,000 less teachers in 1933 or an increase of about two pupils for each teacher."

EXPENDITURES HERE

In Philadelphia and Pittsburgh $90.37 was spent for the instruction of each pupil as compared with $70.67 for other cities of first and second class school districts. In third class school districts which are located in boroughs and larger townships the per pupil cost was $51.64 and in fourth class school districts was $41.44.

Teachers' salaries dropped almost $5,000,000 from $94,041,789 in 1932 to $89,455,056 in 1933.

The percentage of taxes collected slumped 13.1 per cent from 1932 to 1933, and state and federal subsidy payments were cut 13.2 per cent in the same period.

Despite an increase of one mill, from 17 to 18, in the tax levy, and an increase from 70 to 76 in the rate of assessment, taxes levied for school purposes in 1933 were $152,375,287 or almost $4,000,000 less than the total of $156,312,307 for 1932. Taxes collected for school purposes in 1933 were $114,279,659 in 1933 as compared with $128,487,311 in 1932.

PINCHOT RAPS RELIEF PLAN

HARRISBURG, June 21.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot says proposals to transfer money from the motor fund for relief are "unworkable."

In a letter to Alba J. Johnson, president of the State Chamber of Commerce, the Governor expresses no opinion as to whether or not a special session will be necessary, but points out "the state can pay no money without an appropriation by the Legislature."

Charles A. Waters, State Treasurer, proposed the emergency in relief finances be met through transfer rather than appropriation.

Unverified reports have persisted that the federal government will not pledge funds for long-term relief in Pennsylvania unless the commonwealth promises to share in the cost.

In a report to Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, yesterday, Eric H. Biddle, state administrator, said the discontinued civil works program was a model solution to relief problems both from social and economic viewpoints.

To directors of county relief boards who met to lay plans for carrying on works relief projects until next spring, Biddle gave instructions to clean up projects now under way and withhold action on others pending word from Washington concerning anticipated long-term aid.

Pitt Graduates Lead As School Teachers

A report issued by the State Teacher Bureau at Harrisburg reveals that over a period of the past 13 years the University of Pittsburgh leads the educational institutions of this state in the total number of teachers certificated for active teaching service. Statistics show that of the 69 institutions authorized to accredit graduates for teacher certification, Pitt, since 1921, has averaged a total of 3,089 certificates. The University of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State College rank second and third with a total of 2,651 and 2,407, respectively.

TEACHER FIRING DENOUNCED

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, June 21.—A vigorous protest against school boards which issue blanket dismissals of their teachers without regard to merit or length of service was made today by Gov. Gifford Pinchot in his weekly letter on affairs in Harrisburg.

Asserting such was not the general practice, the Governor singled out specifically the situation of Bloomsburg which he said was called to his attention by Dr. J. Herbert Kelley, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania State Education Association.

The Governor said he hoped some day Pennsylvania will have its public school teachers on civil service or an equivalent tenure plan.

The report of the Education Association's Commission on Professional ethics and its Committee on Civil Service showed that 29 teachers were dismissed at Bloomburg ostensibly for economy reasons, according to the Governor. He commented:

"But the fly in the ointment is that they were not even given a chance to teach at a lower salary."

Terming their dismissals a "shameful thing," the Governor wrote:

"Every so often something like this happens to go a long way toward destroying the faith of the people in their schools."

HONOR COLFAX TEACHER

Mrs. Lillian McCall Stofiel, 70, for 36 years a teacher in Pittsburgh schools, will be retired on pension June 28, it was announced by the Board of Education today. She lives at 301 First avenue, Tarentum.

Mrs. Stofiel was educated in Tarentum and Pittsburgh schools, and began teaching in 1898, soon after the death of her husband, Leonard E. Stofiel, legislative correspondent of the old Pittsburgh Dispatch. Her first position was in the Woods Run school, where she remained five years, later going to the Washington school, where she served 20 years. For the last 11 years she has been connected with the faculty of the Colfax School in Squirrel Hill.

A reception in her honor was given by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Colfax school last Friday, when she was presented a silver brooch surrounded by four pearls.

State Farmers Pay Interest On Loans

Approximately 95 per cent of the Pennsylvania farmers whose interest payments on land bank loans was due May 1 made their payments to the Federal Land Bank of Baltimore by June 1, according to Henry S. Bepler, secretary-treasurer of the Allegheny County National Farm Loan Association. Mr. Bepler said that, although the payments on the principal of the loans do not begin to fall due until 1938, a number of such payments have already been made.

RUSHMORE TEXT VOTE RETURNS BEGINNING

First vote of the Pittsburgh Regional Committee was being received today in the selection of the tri-state district winners of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial inscription competition.

The committee members were judging the four classifications of entries separately for the five best texts in each group. Five honorable mentions also will be made in each classification.

Those men, women and youths of Western Pennsylvania whose texts will be selected as the best will have the distinction of their versions of America's epic being submitted to President Roosevelt and his national committee on awards. Similar winning entries from regional districts throughout the country will be considered by the national committee. It will select the national winners to receive cash and scholarship awards.

The first winners in each classification of the national awards will receive a trip to Washington where the prizes will be presented. Winners selected by the Pittsburgh regional committee are expected to be announced Sunday. The national committee will name the award winners after President Roosevelt's return from his ocean trip.

The competition was conducted by the Sun-Telegraph and associated Hearst newspapers for the Mount Rushmore Memorial Commission to seek the best inscription of America's epic to be carved on the great national monument in South Dakota. The quest opened on Washington's Birthday and closed on Memorial Day.

ARMY BOMBERS SEEK TO SET NEW MARK

By FRANK WALDROP
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The wartime efficiency of the highly secret Martin bombers with which the Army Air Corps is stocking up, will be tested within the next five weeks, it was learned today, by a record formation flight of 10 of these planes from Washington to Nome, Alaska.

A picked crew of 40 men headed by Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief of the Air Corps, will make the flight of more than 4,000 miles, stopping only at Minneapolis for refueling.

Utmost secrecy is shrouding the the flight plans and great care is being taken not to give other nations an opportunity to object to the movement of these powerful ships into the Alaskan winds as an unfriendly gesture.

FLIGHT APPROVED

However, it was learned, the State Department has approved the flight and the Army is going through, determined to know just how well it could function if it were necessary in wartime to concentrate power at the apex of the "triangle of force" that would control the Pacific.

For several years there has been agitation to strengthen the United States position in Alaska from a national defense standpoint and in the past year extensive naval charting and mapping has been started, and large sums of PWA money allotted to the development of roads and airports.

The plans and training division of the Air Corps has had a special section at work since early this year, it was learned, drawing up detailed specifications not only for the Alaskan flight, but also a round-the-world hop of another squadron of these Martin bombers, in each instance laying off mileage in great strips which would demand of the ships that they shatter all records for nonstop formation flying.

PILOTS COMPETE

The best of the pilots who survived the grueling experience of the airmail early this year are competing for places on the roster which will be completed in the next few days.

The flight will be made in two hops: one from Bolling Field, Washington, to Minneapolis, of approximately 1,100 miles, and one of more than 3,000 miles across the mountainous wastes of Canada and the interior of Alaska to the small city on the edge of the Bering Sea.

The first hop will serve merely to tune up the crews for the grind of a day and a night and a day that will follow in the final stretch across the wild countryside which, in great part, has never been mapped or seen by white men except from the air.

In making the 3,000-mile hop from Minneapolis to Nome, the Army would shatter a record nonstop formation flight set earlier this year by the Navy, when Lieut. Com. Knefler McGinnis headed a squadron over a 2,100-mile route from San Diego to Honolulu.

CHINESE GANG FREES CAPTIVES

SHANGHAI, June 21.—(AP.)—The roar of British airplanes over a swampy hideaway of desperate Chinese pirates was credited today for the release of six Englishmen, kidnaped when the brigands commandeered a vessel at sea last Sunday.

British naval advices said the six are aboard the aircraft carrier Eagle and were being returned to the base at Weihaiwei.

Aviators who flew over the lair frightened the outlaws so badly that they turned the Englishmen adrift in small boats in delta waters. Naval airplanes spotted them and carried them to the aircraft carrier.

Twenty of the 21 others kidnaped at sea are still captives. One Chinese was set free, but a Japanese and 19 Chinamen remain in the hands of the pirates who are demanding ransom.

The pirates took over the S. S. Shuntien, flying the British flag, Sunday night off the mouth of the Yellow River. They shot one officer and navigated the vessel themselves for 24 hours before leaving in junks with loot and the prisoners.

British Rap Reich's Debt Moratorium

LONDON, June 21.—(INS.)—Great Britain today sent a formal note to Germany, protesting against the moratorium declared by the Reich on payments of interest on the Dawes Plan and Young Plan loans.

Steps to retaliate by impounding German commercial credits in Great Britain and imposing tariff restrictions on German imports already are being taken by the British government. It is intended to put these retaliatory measures into effect unless Germany takes steps by July 1 to protect the interest of British holders of German bonds.

Harvard Grads Crown 'Hanfy' With Confetti

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 21.—(AP.)—Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengl, leader in Nazi Germany and aide to Adolph Hitler, marched side by side with a Jew in the parade of his Harvard class to the stadium for class day exercises yesterday.

The Jewish alumnus who strode beside the Hitlerite was Max L. Pinanski, of Portland, Me., a graduate of Harvard law in 1907. He is a Republican candidate for State Senator in Maine.

Hanfstaengl's police guard, incidentally, consisted of Benjamin P. Goodman and William Goulston, both Jewish.

Taking part in the traditional class day confetti battle in the Harvard Stadium, "Hanfy" was the object of a concerted attack by the other members of the class of 1909.

They pelted him with confetti and paper streamers; they crammed confetti down his neck and into his ears, and finally Louis Agassiz Shaw, socially prominent Harvard graduate from Beverly, Mass., crowned him with an empty confetti carton.

Hanfstaengl took the horseplay in good part, and after the exercises were over remarked:

"It was one of the happiest days I have experienced in years."

During the evening he attended the annual senior spread in the courtyards of the Harvard houses. An accomplished pianist—he frequently plays in Germany for Chancellor Adolph Hitler—he displayed his prowess for the senior class.

'Red' Leader Faces Trial for Treason

BERLIN, June 21.—(INS.)—Ernest Thaelmann, former leader of the Communist Party in Germany, who once received about 6,000,000 votes for the presidency of the Reich, will be tried on a charge of high treason this summer.

U. S. TO RETAIN COMBINED FLEET

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The combined United States fleet will be maintained in the Pacific indefinitely following its return there in November, Secretary of the Navy Swanson disclosed today.

Recent exercises, Swanson said, have showed the fleet operates more efficiently as a single unit than when it is divided into a Pacific and Atlantic group.

Although the Atlantic unit always will be available for a quick return to the East in the event of necessity, Swanson said there were no plans to separate it from the Pacifice unit at the present time.

Swanson also announced that plans for increasing the naval air strength call for expenditure of $2,700,000 to improve the aircraft construction facilities at the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

This money will be made available shortly from PWA funds, Swanson added. He explained that congressional legislation authorizing a 1,184-plane five-year naval aircraft development program provides that 10 per cent of the planes must be constructed in government yards. For this reason, Swanson said, it has been decided to improve the construction facilities of the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

Swanson also announced the schedule of the fleet from July to September, pending its return to the Pacific.

The fleet, now at sea engaged in tactical exercises, will return to port Saturday, June 23. The vessels of the battle force will put into Newport and then sail to their designated Fourth of July ports. The scouting force will visit Hampton Roads and then disburse to ports along the South Atlantic coast as far south as St. Augustine, Fla., during the Fourth of July period.

Moving Men Err, So Couples Swap Homes

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP.)—Because a crew of sleepy furniture movers made a mistake one dreary morning, two Chicago families have been occupying each other's homes for the past seven years.

This came to light yesterday when application was made to the Home Owners Loan Corporation for help on a mortgage.

The houses, both in the same block, were new and very similar in appearance seven years ago.

But neither the Frank Dritsches nor the Joseph Raabs wanted to correct the error, so they merely transferred titles.

HITLER TO VISIT HINDENBURG

BERLIN, June 21.—(AP.)—Chancellor Hitler left today for Neudeck to consult President Paul Von Hindenburg, who yesterday indorsed a vigorous criticism of the Nazi regime by Franz Von Papen, vice-chancellor.

Officially, Hitler's purpose was to report "to the Reichs-president on the Venice meeting with Mussolini." It was generally assumed, however, that Von Papen's speech would be an important added subject of conversation.

Von Hindenburg is known to agree on many points with Von Papen, who represents the conservative element in the government.

The visit assumed added significance when it was announced at the vice chancellor's office that Von Papen soon would visit the President.

A spokesman emphasized that Hitler and Von Papen would not be at Neudeck simultaneously.

50 Killed in Soviet Chemical Explosion

MOSCOW, June 21.—(INS.)—Approximately 50 workmen were killed in a severe explosion which wrecked the interior of the four-story Frunze Chemical Factory in Moscow, June 16, International News Service learned exclusively today.

No official account of the catastrophe has yet been issued but it is understood the police are still investigating the cause. It is believed that the explosion may have been caused by spontaneous combustion or as a result of carelessness on the part of a workman.

France May Balk Parley on Navies

PARIS, June 21.—(AP.)—Although France has accepted the invitation of Great Britain to participate in discussions preliminary to next year's naval conference, difficulties in the way of such a meeting appeared today.

In parliamentary circles it was said that France is urging that Soviet Russia also be asked to take part in the preliminary meetings. In the same quarters it was reported that Italy, also invited to present its views on naval matters in London, is insisting that Germany be asked to the sessions.

FLASH! 12 months* guarantee against all road hazards now backs up all Goodyear All-Weather Tires or Goodyear Pathfinders! See us for full particulars of this clean-cut, out-and-out guarantee.
*(6 months in commercial service.)

THE BIG NEWS IS, THIS NEW "G3" IS A SENSATION!

LOOK AT THE NON-SKID

AND HERE'S WHY

HERE'S the tire that stood up under the toughest punishment a test fleet ever handed out. Brakes gave out—but the "G-3" All-Weather kept right on rolling. It kept its grip 43% longer than former All-Weathers—twice as long as other makes of tires tested against it.

That's the big news that Goodyear told in advertising—and it started a rush of buyers to our stores—and to every Goodyear dealer's straight across the country. This tire certainly has what car owners want—more miles of safety at no extra cost. Come in—see its heavier, wider, flatter tread with GRIP in the center—and see why Supertwist, Goodyear's patented ply material, provides the only body that can stand up to this mighty tread!

in the center of this tread—the spot that counts, because that's where the tread contacts the ground. Remember this when others try to duplicate what the "G-3" gives you: You have to have "NON-SKID" before any tire can give you "NON-SKID MILEAGE"—and you have to have Goodyear Supertwist beneath this type of tread to make it a real success.

A WORD TO THE WISE
It is very possible the restrictions being placed on crude rubber will affect tire prices. Therefore, by buying now, you may save some money.

BRITISH DOLE 'HURTS RECOVERY'

(Editor's Note—Many believe the dole has brought unemployment permanently to Great Britain. H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service staff correspondent, writes in the tenth article of his series on British recovery.

England's dole, Knickerbocker says, is one of the chief economic characteristics that differentiate that country from America.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

LONDON, June 21.—Five men walk down Piccadilly in the gutter. Two in front, one in the middle and two behind. They hold their arms down stiffly by their sides and, with heads bent, they sing.

Their heavy voices crash through the roar of traffic and passersby pause. A sixth man passes the hat.

Their song is a Welsh hymn. It is dolorous and its mournful cadences tell the other side of the bright story of British recovery. They are Welsh miners. They have not mined for many years. They may never mine again. They are "permanently unemployed."

The dole is to blame. Britain will never fully recover so long as she has the dole. It has caused unemployment. It has demoralized the working classes. It has ground down the whole population with an intolerable tax burden.

PERPETUATING IDLENESS

It has created a whole class of men who never will work again. It has prevented the migration of men from dying industries into new industries. It has made unemployment permanent. It has presented this fair country with "derelict areas." Pools of idleness where whole communities are rotting in despair.

That is what a minority in England thinks. It is not even a large minority. It is not powerful at home but it has powerful supporters abroad. It deserves to have a hearing.

Furthermore, the dole is a question that interests America as it must interest every country with a large unemployment.

The fact that England gives a dole is one of the chief economic characteristics that differentiate this country from America. The other chief characteristic is perhaps the fact that this country, a great creditor, imports more than it exports, whereas America, also a great creditor, continues to export more than it imports.

PAID ALL JOBLESS

But any investigations that would throw light on the comparative methods of recovery in Britain and America must take full account of the dole.

First of all, what is the dole?

It is a money payment to every unemployed manual worker in England from 16 to 65 years old, except farm laborers, domestic servants and a few railway, public utility and other employes.

How much do they get?

The weekly rate in 1933 was for men over 21, $3.71; from 18 to 21, $3.12; 17 to 18, $2.00; 16 to 17, $1.37. It was for women over 21, $3.37; 18 to 21, $2.62; 17 to 18, $1.62; 16 to 17, $1.12.

For each adult dependent the family received $2 a week and for each child 50 cents a week. The actual average payment per claimant in 1933 was $4.25.

Can they live on that?

John Evans, an unemployed mechanic, gives the answer. Evans has had only four years work out of the last 11. He is married, has two children, one eight and the other 11, and the four of them receive a total dole of $6.81 a week.

HOW DOLE IS SPENT

Evans explained:

"We pay $2.75 for rent, 25 cents for gas, 25 cents for electricity, 27 cents for health insurance, 72 cents for coal and 25 cents for sundries such as soap, washing powder, polish, matches; and then 27 cents a week for my club.

"That leaves $2 a week for food for four of us. That works out at about 7 cents per head per day.

"This is how we spend out $2. We have 3 tins of milk—the cheap 6-cent stuff—half a pound of tea, four pounds of sugar, one and a half pounds of margarine—the very cheapest kind—2 pounds of loose oatmeal, half a pound of cheapest lard, one pound of jam, half a pound of cheese and half a pound of pearl barley.

"But the main article of an unemployed man's diet is white bread. Seventy-five cents a week for bread. Bread. I hate the very word. The sight of bread makes me feel sick. Many a time my wife and I have looked at the bread and carried on without the meal. If you want to vary it, you change from marge to lard and when you're tired of that you go back to jam—if there's any left; but mostly the wife and I leave the jam to the kiddies and satisfy ourselves with the nice fruity label on the jar."

Nevertheless John Evans has managed to subsist on this for five out of 11 years. More than five million others have done the same for varying periods.

2 MILLION CLAIMANTS

The average weekly number of claimants during 1933 was 2,100,000. They were not, of course, the same persons throughout the year. It is estimated that about 5,500,000 different persons received the dole during the year. The total payments were about $500,000,000.

Where does the money come from?

It came originally from the unemployment insurance fund fed by contribution in equal parts from workers in employment, employers and the government. That was in 1913. The dole was then not a dole at all. It was legitimate insurance. Benefits were low, $1.70 a week and the fund financed itself.

During the war there was no unemployment. Everybody had a job and the unemployment insurance fund grew massively. Two years of post-war depression wiped it out. In 1922 the fund began to borrow from the government. It owes the government today $150,000,000. During the last depression period 1929-1932 the government has paid more than one-half of the benefits.

FIRST PRINCIPLE ABANDONED

At first only workers who had paid their insurance premiums could receive benefits when they became unemployed and then only a stated time. Gradually as unemployment grew this principle was abandoned until today all the industrial unemployed who have paid a minimum of contributions receive benefits for an indefinite period. What had been insurance became in effect a dole.

Now what has been the effect of all this? It's beneficient effects will be set forth in the article to follow. At the moment the persons who emphasize the malign effects have the floor.

Chief among them is Sir Josiah Stamp, president of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway, director of the Bank of England and a power in the land. A number of conservative economists are his allies. Chief foreign ally is Andre Siegfried, the brilliant Frenchman.

Their argument is about as follows: The dole constitutes a minimum wage. It is fixed so high that British costs are above those of the outside world. Higher costs prevent Britain from competing successfully for sales abroad. Reduction of British exports meant more unemployment. More unemployment meant higher taxes. Higher taxes meant higher costs. Higher costs meant still fewer sales abroad. Result, a hard core of permanent unemployed.

be blood, police turned to an Englishman in their investigation.

They expressed belief Capt. Frederick Davey, with whom Miss Ferrand was said to have lived before her marriage to Poderjay, would prove an important witness.

Missing Bride's Husband Linked in New Romance

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—A topsy-turvy scene, with papers strewn over the floor, met the gaze of a Negro maid who entered the apartment of Capt. Ivan Poderjay on December 22, last.

This disclosure, from a reliable source, was contrary to earlier, less reliable reports, and it added new facets to the already multi-faced mystery of the missing Agnes Tufverson.

Still another new disclosure, from the same reliable source, was to the effect the dashing, now suspected Poderjay made love to a widowed concert violinist simultaneously with the courting of Miss Tufverson, the successful woman lawyer.

JILTED BY VIOLINIST

The police learned the concert violinist repulsed him. They learned also that Poderjay attempted to induce her father, a patent attorney, to join him in business, but dropped the idea when the patent attorney demanded Poderjay provide part of the capital.

The Negro maid, detectives said, was Flora Miller. She left the Poderjay apartment at 11 o'clock on December 20, then seeing Miss Tufverson for the last time. She was ordered by Poderjay to return on the twenty-second.

When she came back, she told the police, the apartment was awry. Poderjay was poring over correspondence and papers. Other papers were strewn over the floor.

BURIALS PROBED

The four trunks—around which the interest of the mystery centers—were packed and ready to be sent to the steamer.

The maid cleaned the apartment and destroyed the papers on the floor in an incinerator.

Poderjay, who is reported to have stayed alone in his cabin with one of his trunks throughout his voyage to England, now is held in Vienna as a bigamist suspect.

On the theory that Miss Tufverson may have been murdered and secretly interred, police today were directing inquiry into all recent burials of any unusual character.

Drug Purchase New Clue In Missing Bride Case

NEW YORK, June 21.—(INS.)—A man resembling Ivan Poderjay purchased a "large quantity" of drugs at a local chemical firm late in December, 1933, police learned this afternoon.

While the nature of the drugs was not revealed, it was recalled that Miss Olive Tufverson, of Detroit, sister of the mysteriously missing Agnes Tufverson, expressed firm belief her sister was drugged before her disappearance.

Old Trunk Death Suspect Held Missing Bride Clue

DETROIT, June 21.—(AP.)—Admitting they were taking a "shot in the dark," police said today they would cable to Vienna the fingerprint classifications of Eugene Leroy, long-sought Detroit trunk murder suspect, for comparison with the prints of Capt. Ivan Poderjay, held there in connection with the disappearance of Miss Agnes Tufverson, his bride.

Leroy has been sought in vain since the body of Mrs. Katherine Jackson was found stuffed in a trunk in a New York express office in June, 1920. The trunk had been shipped from a Detroit rooming house where she had and Leroy had lived together.

Police Superintendant John P. Smith said there was some similarity in the descriptions of Poderjay, 35, and Leroy who is now about 38.

Killed by Trap He Set for Bear

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, June 21.—(AP.)—A gun trap that A. B. Boatman, 65, Nenana, had set for bears caused his death on the Tanana River, friends have learned.

Boatman, accompanied by his 40-year-old son, went to inspect the trap. Believing it had been discharged, he started to investigate and the trap went off, the bullet killing him.

Wife Says Mate Beat Her, Seeks Divorce

Testifying her husband threw her against a radiator, fractured her nose, frequently beat and choked her, and threatened her life, Mrs. Lillian B. Lusk, 5420 Ellsworth avenue, appeared today before Judge George V. Moore seeking a divorce. The Lusks were married in 1925. They have been separated since a year ago last month. Mrs. Lusk testified that her husband, a lumber salesman, was continually intoxicated.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

One of our Globe Trotters has just received a distinguished honor.

She is Rosella Kanarik, of Northumberland avenue.

Miss Kanarik has just received her doctor's degree in mathematics, and I am almost certain that she is the first woman in the history of the University of Pittsburgh to make this grade.

Congratulations from all the Globe Trotters.

* * *

I hope you have not forgotten the suggestion of the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society. I quote from their letter:

"In these days of limited rainfall everyone should think about the possibility of placing water where birds and pets can receive a fresh supply at all times."

* * *

Mrs. Sweeney is hoping that the members of a certain girls' baseball team in Greensburg read this column and get in touch with her.

She arranged for a Sunday game with them, only to find now that she is not certain whether or not the law will permit a Sunday evening game.

* * *

I have been doing pretty well for the infants without cribs or baby buggies, but I cannot seem to make much headway for adults in need of wheel-chairs.

If you have one or know where I can get one, call Ann Bales, Globe Trotter's office.

Diamond, Wilmot Join Penner Broadcast

Stephanie Diamond and Tom Wilmot, WCAE dramatic stars and gag writers, have been summoned to Washington to join Joe Penner in his NBC-KDKA network broadcast next Sunday night.

The appearance of Miss Diamond and Wilmot on the "big time" follows closely on the heels of Howard Price's concert on NBC-WEAF last week, when the WCAE tenor sang a program of popular songs on that network.

Barthelmess, Aircaster Old Pals

By AIRCASTER

Dick Barthelmess' appearance on WCAE tonight at 8 with Rudy Vallee revives memories of bright college years. I knew him "when"—and fame and fortune in filmland have changed him not at all.

We were classmates and roommates at Trinity in Hartford back in '14, when, out of a series of youthful escapades, a lifelong friendship grew.

It's just as well to skip those days when we did our best to qualify for Kappa Beta Phi, an ornery society for those who couldn't earn a Phi Beta Kappa key, and whose chief achievement was the ability to bottom-up a two-quart scuttle of suds to the count of 10.

It's more interesting to note that Dick did his first work in the movies when he was a sophomore 'neath the elms of Trinity.

* * *

HIS FIRST JOB

We stayed in Hartford that summer vacation, Dick playing juvenile roles for a fly-by-night movie producer; I working at an oily milling machine in a munitions factory for $11 a week, making shrapnel for the Allies to shoot at each other.

The two of us, sleeping now in the Psi U house and again at the Alpha Delt, lived on those 11 hard-earned dollars, because Dick never was paid for his long hours before the camera. The movie company one evening stealthily folded its tents and did a fadeout. And that was Dick's first and sorriest experience with the fickle flickers.

* * *

THE BEST MAN

We made each other a promise in those bright youthful years—that if and when either of us were wed, the other should be best man. Dick was my moral support when I timidly traipsed the be-ribboned aisle of the Little Church Around the Corner some years later, and I mean best man literally.

He had become famous in "Broken Blossoms," "Way Down East" and other great Griffith pictures of the time, and all eyes in the church full of people were for him. No one took any notice of the groom. And that was a break.

But "Bottles," for that was Dick's nickname (at least the politest one) hadn't lived up to his part of the bargain. He had married Mary Hay somewhat hastily and already was repenting (with no discredit whatever to the lovely lady) when he greeted me in New York on the eve of my wedding.

"For heaven's sake, Jimmy," he earnestly urged me, "don't get married!"

And I might have replied, but didn't:

"Don't expect me to be your best man every time!"

Rabbi Wise Speaks Over WCAE

Rearrangement of the early evening schedule enables WCAE tonight to bring the address of Rabbi Stephen S. Wise in the broadcast of "The Realities of Democracy" at 6 o'clock.

At 6:45, Howard Price, tenor, sings several request numbers, and at 7, WCAE broadcasts the Manhattan Merry-Go-Round.

The baseball scores are broadcast at 6:40 and 11 o'clock.

Poultry Expert Gives Advice

Prof. H. H. Kauffman, poultry expert of Pennsylvania State College, will be guest speaker of Henry R. Ehy, county agricultural agent, on the weekly farm and garden program of the Sun-Telegraph Globe-Trotter tomorrow at 12:15 p. m.

Prof. Kauffman will be interviewed on turkey raising, and a special free bulletin will be offered.

Lost Ways

I cannot hope to tread that road again
Of petaled carpet and an arch of green,
Fretworked against the happiest day I've seen
Before and since the Epilogue of pain
Is as the Prologue—and must thus remain—
For me life played a charming Interlude,
A theme of Love, an all too brief Etude,
And left a haunting fragment of refrain.

I'll meet that road again at some forked way;
I may not recognize it for the years
That choked my heart just as they choked that gay
Florescence, and obscured my eyes with tears:
I'll feel again, perhaps, when birds have sung
That latent Aria of time when love was young.

—Rosalind A. Wade.

Nice Guy, Though

A movie sheik with a reputation of being a hypochondriac was begging sympathy from his baby doll for an imaginary ill. She prescribed a salt-soda hot water solution through the nose.

"Oh, yeah," the ham screamed, "and drown myself!"

The Retort Proper

Take this from Willard's brother, Jim Keefe. Desperate over his inability to find a leading man to tolerate the temperamental outbursts of his tigress leading lady (she had literally clawed two sheiks off the set), a studio producer appealed for suggestions.

One memo came in, unsigned. It advised:

"Get Clyde Beatty!"

Newspaperman Stuff

Dusty Rhodes forwards this one on a British cub reporter who had frequently been reprimanded for relating too many details. He was warned to be brief. So this is what he turned in on a suicide story:

"A shooting affair occurred last night. Sir Dwight Hopeless, a guest at Lady Panmore's ball, complained of feeling ill. He took a highball, his hat, his coat, his cane, his departure, no notice of friends, a taxi, a pistol from his pocket, and finally his life. Nice chap. Regrets and all that."

Hero

Unless you're a doctor or a scientist, you've probably never heard of Henry T. Koenig, and you'll never hear of him again, because the angels claimed him only a few days ago. But to me, Henry Koenig is a little more than a mere chemist. He's a hero.

Years ago, when Madame Curie was in the process of discovering radium, she needed the assistance of men whom she could trust. In all, there were 20, and Koenig was not the least of them.

He worked hard, weighing infinitesimal parts of a gram of this strange substance, figuring the value of its rays, trying to discover some way of robbing it from the earth cheaply. As all of us know now, radium finally became the only substance known to arrest cancer, and, as few of us know, Henry Koenig was the person who went into the wilds of the Belgian Congo and devised a means of producing it more cheaply than was thought possible.

His confreres in Denver, his home town, and other places, warned him of the danger of working around radium. But Koenig was too busy to listen. So he died the other day, the last of the 20 who worked with the grand old gal.

He died because he had exposed himself to the deadly rays. He died of cancer. And as he faded out of focus he must have smiled to himself, because the treatment which failed to help his condition was radium!

How Embarrassing!

Jimmy Kern, of the Yacht Club Boys, was in a gaming house at Galveston recently when a woman bought a stack of chips. She declared she would play her age on the roulette wheel. She placed the stack on No. 22—and No. 32 won!

Portrait of a Sultan

The Sultan of Johore had all his teeth capped in gold for his recent Hollywood visit. It is an old East Indian custom, it seems. But when he observed that he was the only one in California on the gold-tooth standard, he had the caps removed, unveiling a beautiful set of crushers.

He remained a fortnight longer than he expected in Los Angeles because a foot doctor, called in to nurse his gout, broke two bones in his feet.

Variation of Old Theme

Edith Wilkerson, one of the Hollywood reporters, got a card from Arthur Kober, the writer, when he recently holidayed in Spain. It read:

"Having a fine time. Wish you were here, instead of me!"

As If You Didn't Know

The Phantom Gypsy argues that if all the press agents were laid end to end they might make a column. The obituary!

Thenks, Veddy Mitch

"There are a number of newspapermen writing the news 'behind the headlines' but Winchell seems to be the only one who can write the news ahead of the headlines"—Miller in the Thomaston, Ga., Times.

Sotto Voce

Operator One: Stop wasting both your time and mine with anonymous information. I wicker it. Your name will never be revealed, so forget it.

In Fewer Words

Izzy Elinson observes: I hear that one of the radio comics had to turn down a swell offer to go to Hollywood. His jokes were too old to make the trip!

Gosh, Yes!

H. Zuberhoff yells, but loud, that the following things certainly could be put to better use: The diamonds on the collar of Peggy Joyce's mutt... The second of the twin beds... The kissproof lipstick Greta uses... The ink for celebs' autographs... The starch in Hoover's collars... Elissa Landi's frigidaire... Johnny Weissmuller's barber... Ben Bernie's fiddle!

And Dietrich's pants!

Shoe Shiner And Maids Act, Too

By JIMMY CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, June 21.—Hello! Not satisfied with the prestige of their close contact with the reigning favorites of filmdon, the personal aides of the stars are trying for a greater glory through the same medium which made their masters and mistresses famous.

Oscar Smith, studio bootblack, started the side-line of acting at the time he was valet to the late Wallace Reid. He counts the number of pictures he has appeared in by the hundreds, and his fame has spread the length of Central avenue, the Harlem of Los Angeles.

Libby Taylor is another to try the double-duty routine. In real life she is Mae West's maid, and she's carrying the role to the screen. Before she took the job, she was actually an actress on Broadway, but something called depression hit her, too.

Mack Gray, who is laughingly known as "The Killer," George Raft's bodyguard, craves a film career. His kenest rival for cinematic honors is "Cracker" Henderson, Gary Cooper's man Friday, who often tops him by getting a line or two to speak on the screen. Nick Copeland, Frank Fay's famous stooge, has ceased sitting around the afternoon and night hangouts and is taking his celluloid endeavors seriously. Tammany Young, who once bid fair to out-crash the famous One-eyed Connolly, has attached himself to W. C. Fields as a stooge on and off the screen.

* * *

Henry Wilcoxon, soon to be seen as Marc Antony in "Cleopatra," lost his valet, Reuben Shaffer, to the screen. Reuben was bitten by the movie bug and talked himself into a job at Paramount, leaving his master to take care of his own things.

"Slick'em," the M-G-M bootblack, gloats over his cinema success. Although he has appeared in many of his studio's productions, he got his big thrill when borrowed by Universal for a role. Betty Sanford, the M-G-M manicurist, has even rated her name on the screen for some of her work.

When Duke York, Dick Arlen's secretary, lands a film job, he just quits pen-and-pencil tasks until the grease paint routine is finished.

* * *

Pauline Lord, making her movie debut in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," was complaining to a friend about a car with which she was having a bit of difficulty.

"What model is it?" questioned the friend.

"There's nothing model about it. It's a horrible example!" snapped Pauline.

* * *

Dashing around gossipy corners—The Ralph Bellamys are in New York by the time you read this, and Glenda Farrell is on her way to kiss Robert Riskin when he lands from Europe . . . Henry Willson, the writer, is breaking in a new car—and a romance, with Ida Lupino.

* * *

Marian Marsh, rated as one of the finest horsewomen in the film colony, is standing up for her meals. Upon her return to Hollywood, Marian went a-galloping and ended up on a runaway horse. Another nag tossed her to the ground last Sunday and nearly trampled her. She's thinking of switching to a bicycle.

* * *

Odds and Ends—Jack Benny is SO TIRED with all his work he doesn't think he'll be able to finish his current film—in fact, he doesn't want to think about the other engagements he just signed to do.

* * *

Joey Ray went to visit Phil Regan on the "Student Tour" set at M-G-M, and just as a gag, Phil introduced Joey as his brother to a young cutie. When Phil disappeared, the girl turned to Joey and asked if he was really Phil's brother. Joey, carrying on the joke, nodded. The dame hauled off and smacked Joey across the face.

"Go take that to your brother," she yelled. "That's for being fresh!"

Actors Deny 'Useless' Charge

By HARRISON CARROLL
International News Service Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD, June 21.—Czecho-Slovakia's gift to the movies, Francis Lederer, started an argument and found himself the target for wholesale slams by disapproving fellow-players.

The dark-haired, romantic-looking Lederer, now about to take a leading role in Paramount's "Pursuit of Happiness," declares acting, by itself, to be a practically useless art and insists that he remains in the profession only as a means of advancing his pet cause, world peace.

"Aside from its inspirational value, which is usually wasted," Lederer argued, "acting has practically no value in this social system. I stay an actor because I want to further world peace, and because nobody will listen to me unless I am known, unless I am a public figure."

The star, who became a Broadway matinee idol for his performance in "Autumn Crocus" and who has made one picture in Hollywood, admits that he likes acting and always does his best, but is determined to keep it a secondary occupation.

Lederer's easy dismissal of the profession drew tart replies from other film celebrities.

"Nonsense!" exclaimed Cecil B. De Mille. "Entertainment plays a major part in life. Perhaps the actor is not so important as the doctor but, like the proverbial apple a day, he keeps the doctor away."

Sir Guy Standing, English stage and screen star, was vehement in his criticism of Lederer's stand.

"Good acting," he said, "is one of the most powerful factors in the social scheme of things. It presupposes a knowledge of nearly all the other arts.

"If acting could produce nothing but pacifists it would be wasted indeed. But it produces more. It contributed more soldiers to the last war than perhaps any other profession of the same size. And it was actors who buoyed up the morale of the men in the trenches."

Modern, wise-cracking Carole Lombard commented tersely:

"Mr. Lederer confuses acting with bad acting. That's the only kind that's useless."

May Robson Stars In Cameraphone

May Robson's latest characterization is that of a feminine Wall street wizard in "You Can't Buy Everything," which opened yesterday as a first-run feature in the Cameraphone. It will be recalled that Miss Robson made her screen debut in a film titled "The She-Wolf of Wall Street" several years ago, but her new vehicle is not to be confused with that photoplay. Given the assistance of a cast that includes Lewis Stone, Jean Parker and William Bakewell, Miss Robson handles her role in "You Can't Buy Everything" in a manner to build suspense and interest. It is a human yarn, with the star's mania for money hiding a shattered romance that results in several genuine tear-jerking sequences. Her son falls in love with the daughter of her Wall street enemy, and there is one of those sick-bed scenes that results in reconciliations and understanding all around.

Health of Marie Is Guarded

The health of Marie Dressler caused her studio to enforce a rule of no interviewers. Miss Dressler, always the friend of everyone, including newspapermen and writers, was willing to expend her energy in meeting the representatives of the press, but on the advice of her physicians her studio was forced to take steps to guard her health, now somewhat improved.

Odds and Ends.

WHEN A family is in need and requests assistance, the city sends an investigator to determine the urgency of the appeal. Some of the reports that these investigators turn in are completely hilarious. They supply the note that so often turns tragedy into comedy.

I am fortunate enough to be able to give you a few excerpts from some recent reports. They come to me from Ballard Macdonald, who is now working on the new "Scandals" for George White. The excerpts were sent to Ballard by a friend in the department and are all authentic.

Recently there appeared an interesting little piece of irony that I take the liberty of reprinting here. The story comes from London, where Charles Farrell is about to star in a new picture for an English outfit.

As is well known, Farrell is tired of playing sweet, boyish roles. He rose to stardom with Janet Gaynor and then attempted to break the association. But public demand forced them together again in "Change of Heart," their latest release.

When this new offer arrived from England, Charlie accepted it gladly. Gaynor is a fine artist, and none knows it better than Charlie. But he felt that he was being overshadowed and that he would be better off if the public forgot his association with Janet.

Arriving in London, Farrell learned that Sally Stewart would play opposite him. And Sally, according to her proud studio, is known as "The English Janet Gaynor."...

OVER the week-end a famous producer attended a large house party. He romanced a very beefy blonde and, on the way back to town, several of the boys kidded him about it.

"What we want to know, Joe," said one, "is—did she pet?"

"No," replied the producer shortly. "She didn't."

His companions refused to let up. Every two minutes one of them would ask the same question. Did she pet?

The producer finally raised a hand.

"Listen, boys," he said tiredly, "you might as well stop. If that girl had petted, I'd certainly tell you. That much of a gentleman I'm not!" . . .

DramaGroup Expands

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Masquers, whose theater for two seasons has been the Calvary Parish house, are carrying out plans to present their plays in the Nixon next season. This active and enthusiastic dramatic group, which won first prize in the recent Drama League contest, has acquired the rights to "Linga Sarira," new romantic drama by George Seibel, with which it intends to open its season in September.

As a preliminary to more extensive activity, and removal to the downtown district, the Masquers are being incorporated. The policy will be non-commercial and co-operative, the plan being to build up a repertoire company that will include the best of talent from among the more than 50 acting groups in the district. Cast selections will be made on merit and suitability for the parts, no matter whether the players are originally members of the Masquers or not. Players will receive a fixed minimum and a share of the profits—if any.

Membership will not be limited strictly to those who can act. There will be room for others who will have a share in the property and a voice in the group's policy. From among them will be chosen an executive board to supervise production and business matters.

Audience membership, at a subscription fee of $5, will entitle the holder to admission to the six productions of the season, that will be presented at a regular price of $1 top, for reserved seats, and 50 cents, general admission, non-reserved.

Surplus profits will go into a fund for the erection of a building, providing the plan meets sufficient success to assure permanence. It was in such a way that the Theater Guild of New York was able to acquire its own home. Other notable institutions of wide fame that have had similar humble beginnings include the Pasadena Community Playhouse, Cleveland Civic Theater, Moscow Art Theater and the Abbey Theater (Irish Players) in Dublin.

There will be no solicitation of funds—the plan must be selfsupporting or fail—according to the views of the promoters. If the public wants a community playhouse—and this plan is thought to be the answer—it will not be allowed to perish.

In the first season, at least, it will serve to provide plays at times when the theater would be dark otherwise. All productions will be for six nights and two matinees, and there will be six in all.

Lupe Plants' Cooks and Decorates

HOLLYWOOD, June 21.—LUPE VELEZ, Mexico's gift to the Americas, does her own gardening (such like planting trees and things), does most of her own housework and cooking (she can dish up a mean hunk of chili) and furthermore has started a new trend in interior decoration. In one corner of her dining room she has a series of glass shelves illuminated, but brilliantly, and ornamented with ALL OF JOHNNY WEISSMULLER'S swimming medals awarded since the time he first became the country's premier fish. In the other corner are more glass shelves, also illuminated, and resting atop them is LUPE'S collection of ivory and THAT is really something to see.

When this bungalow-on-wheels is completed he will motor among the Californians and do some odd shooting and fishing.

Your Theater and Mine -:- By KARL KRUG

TWO JUVENILE WONDERS

Two new juvenile film stars of surprising power and talent are about to blossom into full flower on Pittsburgh screens.

One is 11-year-old George Breakston, hero of Frank Borzage's "No Greater Glory," which arrived in the Warner today, and the other is 5-year-old Shirley Temple, heroine of Damon Runyon's "Little Miss Marker," coming tomorrow to the Penn.

As the frail weakling of the touching and tender "No Greater Glory," young Breakston gives a performance you won't forget in a hurry, while Shirley, as the dimpled and diminutive siren of "Little Miss Marker," gives a remarkable display of straightforward and admirable acting.

GEORGE BREAKSTON

In view of the ruction being kicked up by these youngsters, short silhouettes of each are probably in order, and I give you first a thumb-nail sketch of George Breakston:

Makes his screen debut in "No Greater Glory" . . . Has never played in motion pictures before . . . Son of a French hat designer and an American war hero . . . George was born in Paris . . . Came to the United States when he was 5 years old . . . Was prominent in Nes York as a radio entertainer . . . Went to California a year ago and plans to become a civil engineer . . . Is saving money he earns as an actor for a college education . . . Goes in for amateur photography and makes toy airplanes . . . Has his own workshop at home which he fitted up himself . . . Has two collies . . . One is called "Queenie" . . . the other "Nemecsek," after his part in "No Greater Glory." . . . Has his own menagerie . . . A guinea pig, six turtles, two goldfish, salamanders and canaries . . . Spends all his allowance on electrical and mechanical apparatus . . . Hopes to be able to afford a motion picture camera soon . . . Is on the basketball team at school . . . His mother fashions hats for the stars at Columbia studios . . . It was through her that he got his first "break" in pictures . . . Was physically and temperamentally perfect for the "No Greater Glory" lead.

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

Weighs 43 pounds and is that many inches tall . . . Is too young to go to school, but it said to have the best memory for lines in Hollywood . . . Her mother read her part in "Little Miss Marker" twice to her and Shirley did it letter-perfect through the whole first rehearsal . . . Has a "crush" on Jimmie Dunn. Likes ice cream with "gravy" on it . . . The gravy is chocolate syrup . . . Her father is a Santa Monica banker . . . She was born in the year of the crash, 1929, but has a bank account of her own . . . Has been in short comedies since she was three, but was "discovered" for feature length films by Lew Brown when he was casting "Stand Up and Cheer" . . . The dimple in her right cheek shows better than the one in her left . . . She has all her baby teeth . . . Will go to school for the first time next September . . . Is tucked in bed promptly at 8 each night . . . Uses no makeup . . . Likes to sing "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" . . . and adds names of people she knows at the end instead of saying "wolf" . . . Is the first of the Temple family to take up acting . . . Her fan mail is enormous, but her parents never read her a line of it . . . They have done an heroic job of keeping her unspoiled thus far.

THE MAGNANIMOUS MENJOU

The week's best press agent story:

Adolph Menjou, of the Pittsburgh Menjous, waved aside a day's salary—and that means quite a sum for Adolphe—in order that a bit player in his current picture might get a new and better job the next day. Menjou's contract for his role in "Little Miss Marker" stated that if he worked one minute after 6 p. m. he was to be paid another day's salary.

James Burke, playing a small part in the picture received his biggest break in years when he got a chance with another studio for a six-weeks' acting role. But the company was to leave for location in a few hours and his last scene in "Little Miss Marker" wasn't finished when the 6 o'clock deadline arrived. That meant Burke would have to report back to the "Little Miss Marker" set the next day. So Menjou worked, without pay, until after midnight, in order that Burke might finish and take his new job.

P. S.—You'll have to take Paramount's word for it that the sleek Adolphe has turned philanthropist.

Torn Between Family Loyalty, Love Which Does Susan Choose

Susan Realizes She Does Not Love Wallace and Tells Aunt Nell

CHAPTER XVI.

She went away, leaving behind her, in the cold air of the pantry, the sweet odor of her mimosa perfume that was the only kind she ever used and that was part of her charm, her allure. Susan waited for Mr. Sholes to walk out after her. But he stood where he was, and after a long silence he spoke.

"Are you really engaged?" he asked.

"Just since last week." Susan raised her head and looked at him, and in that second the whole face of the world changed for her. She knew at last why she had been lingering in the halls and on the staircase of the Center street house for the last week when it was time for him to leave or enter the place. She knew why she had tried to keep Lutie from prying into his few possessions, why she had had that feeling of mingled tenderness and pity at the sight of his bundle of laundry, and why she had been so irritated with Mary when she came down Mills Road clinging to his arm, a few minutes before.

Mary had told her that she was in love with his looks. But the thing was worse than that. She was in love with the man himself. In love for the first time in her life! She recognized this feeling as something totally different from her addiction and liking for Wallace—as different as the sun coming up over a mountain top is different from an electric light bulb flashing on.

While she stood there, looking up at him, he turned and walked out of the pantry. A minute afterward she heard Mary calling him: "You're to sit here beside me, Allen!"

Supper, enlivened by many threats from George Shumaker to "dunk" his doughnuts in his coffee, was a cheerful meal for everyone but Susan and Jim Allbright, apparently. Jim never took his eyes from Mary and Allen Sholes who talked and laughed together like old old friends, and Susan watched them too with a sick and jealous feeling in her heart.

Aunt Scolds Susan

At the end of the meal Mary filled a tray with plates of food and took it up to the Catch-All to her father and mother and Howard who had taken refuge there for the evening. Allen carried up a folding table and the coffee pot for her, and the two of them stayed there talking. As Susan carried out the dishes she could hear Howard telling Allen about his new wall exerciser, and every now and then Mary's voice chimed in with his. Presently John went upstairs too, and a second afterward the telephone on the landing rang.

"Susie, it's a call for you!" Mary's voice came floating down the stairway. "It's you aunt."

Aunt Edna's voice was full of indignation when she spoke to Susan. "Why didn't you let me know you were going over there?" she wanted to know. "Susan, I don't understand your behavior sometimes! Wallace is trying to get you over long distance and I've just told the operator that you'll be here in a half hour if she'll call again. So you'd better come right along!"

The wire made a loud clicking sound as she slammed the receiver on its hook at her end.

Susan went on up the stairs to the Catch-All.

"I'm sorry, but I have to go home," she said to her aunt who was stretched out on the old couch under the windows reading a book. "Wallace has been trying to reach me by long distance and he's going to call again in a half hour."

"Well, you don't have to go home to take the call," John spoke up. "You can have the operator switch it to the telephone here."

Susan shook her head firmly. "Oh, no, I can't do that. Aunt Edna's told the operator that I'll be home in a half hour, and she'll expect me to be there. She's perfectly furious now because I sneaked away from the party this afternoon without saying anything to her—and I don't want to upset her any more."

Has Call Switched

John gave a grunt of disgust. "Well, what did you 'sneak' out for?" he asked. "Why didn't you just walk out like a self-respecting human being instead of a scared rabbit? Why don't you have this call switched to this phone now, as any sensible person would do, instead of rushing home to take it there? You'll have to grow up some time or other, Susan, and learn how to manage things in your own way instead of letting the family do all your thinking for you . . . Gosh!"

"Well, please talk to me about it some other time when we're by ourselves." Susan's face was scarlet and her voice was sharp with irritation. But she knew that John was right in what he said. She ought not to have scurried out of the house that afternoon, without letting anyone know that she was leaving. It had been an undignified childish thing to do.

"I think I'll take your advice and have the call transferred to this telephone, however," she said to John, and went back to the landing to do it.

The members of the supper party were all at work on an enormous jigsaw puzzle when the call came through at 9 o'clock. Wallace's voice, close against her ear, was as clear as if he had been telephoning from a room in the house.

"Hello, sweetheart." She could almost see his dark pleasant face and smell the after-shaving lotion on his cheeks. "Are you missing me?"

"Of couse I am, Wallace?" What else could she say to him?

"Sure?" Across all the dark starry miles between the Cullens' house and his faraway hotel, he seemed to sense the change in her, the doubt and confusion in her mind.

"Of course, Wallace."

"I'm going to be here another week or two," his voice went on. "My dad's pretty sick. He's been in bed ever since we got here. I'll call you tomorrow night, sweetheart. Take care of your lovely self."

Susan Seeks Advice

From where she stood on the landing, Susan could see Aunt Nell. She was in the hall above, looking through a stack of Christmas cards on an old lowboy that was an heirloom in the Cullen family.

Susan went up to her, her gray eyes filled with a puzzled frown and her fingers clasping and unclasping themselves on the frills that edged the bodice of her dress.

"I want to ask you something," she said. "How could I think I was in love with Wallace Steffen for such a long time—tell him I'd marry him—and then, by jinks, find out that I don't really care much about him at all? . . . You'd think I'd have known my own mind about him after seeing so much of him for a year and a half, wouldn't you? But I didn't. He's gone away, and he's going to be gone for a long time. And I don't care if I never see him again."

Aunt Nell laid down the bright green and gold card she had been holding and took both of her slim hands in her plump wrinkled ones.

"If I never were going to see him again it wouldn't be so bad," Susan continued. "But he'll come back, and what on earth will I do? What will I say to him?"

Her aunt studied her for a long time with her bright clear eyes. "Well, Susan, you may not feel like this about him very long," she said finally. "When you see him again you may find that you care for him just as much as you thought you did when you let him give you this lovely ring that you're wearing. In the meantime, don't do anything. Just let things take care of themselves . . . Of course, I wouldn't have the engagement announced or do anything that might humiliate him if you didn't marry him. I'd just sit back and do nothing for a while."

That was on Christmas night—Thursday night.

Father Weds Widow

On Friday afternoon Morris Broderick was married to Mrs. Hopper in the living room of her apartment in the Schuyler Hotel, a room so filled with little smoking tables and teakwood chairs and a whole forest of floor lamps that Susan wondered how Mrs. Hopper moved around in it without knocking something over at every move.

She was an extremely plump woman, and her white lace dress worn over a flesh-colored slip, made her look larger than she was. Her hair was beautifully bleached and waved and she had blue eyes that widened when she talked. Susan heard Uncle Worthy murmur to Aunt Edna that she reminded him of Lillian Russell in her palmy days.

"Oh, you! You gay Lothario!" Aunt Edna snapped back at him. "You can't get over the idea that you're a regular lady killer, can you?"

After the marriage ceremony Mrs. Hooper's maid opened the folding doors and they all trooped in to the dining room to have sandwiches tied with white satin ribbon, wedding cake covered with pink and white frosted Cupids, and champagne which Susan tasted and did not like.

"You must all come here to see us often when we get back from our honeymoon," Mrs. Hopper told them when they were leaving. "We're going on a little cruise down into the West Indies, but we'll be back soon. And we'll send you post cards so you can keep track of us while we're gone."

Lutie, who had drunk her own champagne and Susan's too, cried a little in the taxicab on the way back to Center Street.

"I don't know why it is, but a wedding always strikes me as a bit sad," she said, dabbing at her eyes with her best handkerchief, and Aunt Edna told her sharply that, as a matter of fact, there was nothing more melancholy than a wedding.

"Heaven alone knows how many tears I've cried over mine!" she said with a blighting glance at Uncle Worthy. She was always bad tempered when he admired other women.

Engagement Announced

On Saturday morning there was an announcement of the wedding in the newspaper, and when Lutie passed it across the breakfast table, Susan saw her own face staring up at her from a photograph at the top of the society column . . . a photograph that had been taken at the time of her graduation from high school. Under it was a paragraph of print:

"Miss Susan Broderick of 677 Center street, whose engagement to Mr. Wallace Gunn Steffen was announced on Christmas day at a tea given by her aunt, Mrs. Worthy Broderick. The wedding, which will be an event of early summer, will unite two of the oldest families in this city."

Susan looked up from the paper to meet her aunt's eyes. Aunt Edna's face was a little red and she was smiling in an embarrassed fashion. "I hope that is all right about the wedding coming off in early summer," she said. "I suppose I ought to have asked you about this before I gave it to the paper, Susan, but when the society editor came to see me yesterday morning she said she thought it would be so interesting to announce your father's wedding and your engagement at the same time. So I just went ahead and let her do it."

"I wasn't going to hate it announced just yet," she said slowly, remembering her Aunt Nell's advice to do nothing that would humiliate Wallace if she did break her engagement.

Last night at the Cullens' it had seemed possible, highly probable even, that she would break it. But here in the dining room with the announcement in the newspaper staring up at her like a dark blot, a feeling of certainty that she never would break it came over her. She was engaged to Wallace, and girls did not throw down highly respectable young men for no reason at all except that they'd become infatuated with somebody else—particularly after the engagement was publicly announced. The thing was so rare that it caused a scandal whenever it happened.

Synopsis

Lovely Susan Broderick lives in the old family mansion with her father, Morris, brother John, Uncle Worthy, his wife, Edna, and a spinster aunt, Lutie. Although they have lost their wealth the old folks live in a dream world of social prominence. They feel humiliated when it is necessary to take in a "paying guest." The family wonders what Susan's fiance, Wallace Steffen, young banker, will think. John does not like Wallace. While Susan is waiting for Wallace, Mr. Sholes, the roomer, arrives. Uncle Worthy reprimands her for talking with Sholes. Wallace presents Susan with a diamond and sapphire ring. Later, Susan comes upon the jeweler's box, stamped with the name of a firm long out of business. The Brodericks objected to Suan and John being friendly with their late mother's relatives, the Cullens. Susan tells Cousin Mary about Sholes. Wallace leaves on trip. Susan's father tells family he's going to be married. Susan leaves party at home and joins Cullens.

BILL CUMMINGS FOUGHT OFF a fast field of daring drivers for over 4½ exhausting hours of nerve-racking, record-breaking speed to take the 500-mile classic at the Indianapolis Speedway. Press wires flashed: "Cummings, after stretching himself, first requested a cigarette." It was a Camel! For Bill is a Camel smoker of 12 years' standing, and knows that smoking a Camel gives you a quick "snap-back" in energy!

TRY THIS EXPERIENCE in increasing energy quickly when worn out!

If you have ever tried to clock 300 or 400 miles in one day's drive you can imagine the terrific output of energy a racing driver crowds into "the 500" at Indianapolis.

As Bill Cummings said himself after the race: "33 drivers started the Indianapolis Classic this year...scorching the bricks over that 2½-mile track. For 200 grueling laps...nearly 5 hours of it...we kept up the blistering pace. I had to average 104.863 miles an hour, the new world's record for 'the 500' ...sometimes hitting it up to over 2 miles a minute ...to win. 4 hours and 46 minutes of this wrings the vitality out of a man and you can bet that I felt pretty well played out at the end of the race. My mechanic and I turned to Camels for the first luxurious smoke that always chases that tired feeling away. Any time I'm 'all in' I know that Camels will give me a 'lift' in energy. I smoke them steadily, too, because I know that Camels will never jangle healthy nerves."

This "energizing effect" in Camels, long recognized by Camel smokers, has recently been studied and confirmed by a famous research laboratory in New York. It is harmless, refreshing. You'll like Camels—a matchless blend of costlier tobaccos. You can "get a lift with a Camel" as often as you wish. Camels never get on your nerves, no matter how many you smoke.

Model Builders' Course for Beginners
Lesson II—Carving the Propeller

By LAWRENCE SHAW
National Director

In order to have a propelled model, we of course must have a propeller. Balsa wood propellers may be purchased ready made, but half the fun of model building is making your own parts, complete. While propeller carving is truly an art, it can be acquired with but little coaching, and then improved upon by practice.

ALL-BALSA LOW-WING FLIER AFTER ITS COMPLETION

Today's lesson in our Model Builders' Course for Beginners explains the easiest method of carving a propeller. We will use the Balsa block three-quarters (¾) of an inch by one and one-half inch (1½) by seven inches, which we included in the purchase of our materials, for that purpose.

Follow the Illustration

In addition to following the steps outlined below, be sure that you refer to diagram "B" published with this column, so as to be sure that you make no false step.

STEP NUMBER 1—Our first procedure is to take our propeller block and on each flat side draw diagonal lines, from corner to corner, making an "X." Then where the two lines cross each other in the center, place a small dot and around this dot draw a small circle, as shown in figure 1 in illustration.

STEP NUMBER 2—Cut away your block, along the lines you have drawn, as shown in figure 2 in the illustration. Be careful to cut around the small center circle.

STEP NUMBER 3—Now that we have our prop block shaped, we are ready to begin the actual carving of our propeller. For this we should use a good sharp-bladed penknife, or a special carving knife such as any model supply depots have on sale. Figure number 3 shows us the very first carving operation. We start on the upper corner of the right hand blade, cutting down little by little, being careful not to take too large a piece off each time or cutting away too far.

As we go along, we scoop the wood out rather than cut it away, so that when we are finished the hollow will be concave and not straight. Be sure that you cut away from the hub and not towards the hub. This will prevent you from splitting the block.

When the right blade is fully carved out, turn your blade around (not over) and carve the other blade out on the same side as you were working on first, in the same manner.

STEP NUMBER 4—After both blades have been scooped away, on the same side, we take our fine sandpaper and smooth the prop down carefully. Then we turn the blade over completely on the opposite side and go through exactly the same steps of carving, and sandpapering, as shown in figure 5 in illustration. Then round off the tips.

STEP NUMBER 5—Now insert the propeller shaft through the hub of the propeller. However, since we will not attempt to make this metal fitting until our next lesson, we will have to leave this for a later date. Be sure to save the illustration herewith as it will guide you in properly inserting the shaft at the necessary time.

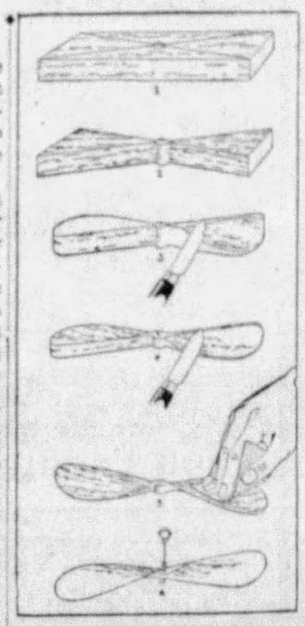
Balancing the Propeller

In order to obtain sufficient flight, the propeller should be evenly balanced.

The simplest method of balancing a propeller is to push a pin through the center of the hub, just where the shaft is to go. Hold the pin loosely between the fingers and with your hand spin the propeller around. If your propeller spins evenly it is properly balanced. However, if one blade seems to fall heavily on the downward motion, that blade must be sandpapered until the propeller spins uniformly.

If after your propeller is carved, smoothly finished off and properly balanced, you find that it isn't just the sort of propeller you expected to make, don't become discouraged. Try another and another. Propeller carving comes to the model builder who practices.

If you should follow the above outline carefully for your first attempt, you should have a fairly smooth performing motor member, and you are on the right track to expert propeller carving!



'PROP' CARVING

Sun-Telegraph 15c Pattern

Here's a frock that decided very early in its career to take a diagonal road to chic. It isn't until it gets down to the skirt that it does anything straight. BOYS, GIRLS JOINING SUN-TELEGRAPH COMIC PARADE

Barney Google

Yesterday's announcement of the Sun-Telegraph comic parade as the big feature for the annual outing this newspaper gives the kiddies of Pittsburgh and vicinity at Kennywood Park, scheduled for Friday, July 13, brought a wave of excitement and scores of entries in the morning's mail.

It is evident that there will be plenty of juvenile "Popeyes," "Barney Googles", "Skippys", "Jiggs" and "Maggies," "Toots and Caspers", "Tim Tylers", "Kalenjammers" among the boys and girls of the Pittsburgh area. In fact there are undoubtedly in real life many of the characters that appear in the daily and Sunday Sun-Telegraph comic pages and they will participate in this unique comic parade.

Attractive prizes will be awarded for the best impersonations of these popular comic characters. They will include expensive bicycles for boys and girls, complete outfits of clothing from the top of the head to the bottom of the feet and scores of other things boys and girls will want. Kiddies, everywhere, are invited to join this comic parade. Send in your entry on the blank on this page.

As usual hundreds of strips of free tickets will be given away for this big outing. Details about this distribution will appear later in the Sun-Telegraph.

COUNTY STARTS 'CRUSADE' IN BEHALF OF TUBE TOLLS

COURT TO RULE ON CREDITORS' BANK STATUS

Paroled in Killing Over Fraud, Man Seeks Depositor Rights

Whether Nazareno Gentile was a depositor in the Pittsburgh American State Bank and Trust Company or was a note creditor as an employe of the institution, whom he shot and killed, is a question Judge James H. Gray, of Common Pleas Court, is wrestling today.

According to claims, Gentile had $7,000 on deposit in the bank. He alleges that Joseph Angelina, teller, advised him to invest the funds and get interest. Gentile says he took Angelina's note for the money. Suit was brought and verdict recovered for $8,176, which included interest.

The case was appealed to the Supreme Court, which decided that the American Surety Company, which was made a co-defendant with the bank, had not been notified soon enough of the fraud committed by Angelina, thus relieving the surety company of any liability.

Attorney C. Elmer Bown, representing Gentile, filed exceptions to the account of Secretary of Banking William D. Gordon because Gentile having won only as a creditor it does not do him any good unless it is decided that he was a depositor. In arguing before the court Bown took the position that Gentile was a depositor and not being included as such, is being deprived of a depositor's rights.

The time the bank closed, Deputy Attorney General David Glick, representing Gordon, claims that Gentile actually had no money on deposit in the bank.

The failed bank did not notify the surety company regarding Gentile's claims until February, 1931, whereas it was held the bank should have notified the company in November of the previous year.

When Gentile discovered the alleged fraud committed on him, he shot Angelina, while the latter was in the office of a magistrate, killing him. He was tried for manslaughter and sentenced to serve from 18 months to six years. He was committed May 3, 1932, and was released on parole last June 23.

CAB GROUP ASKS COUNCIL O. K.

City Councilmen today were to receive a letter from Attorney Herbert Jacobson, counsel for the Zone Cab Corporation, urging the need of a lower taxicab fare in Pittsburgh and pointing out that if permitted to operate cabs here the new company would employ 1,000 residents of Pittsburgh. The letter asks Council to give its support before the Public Service Commission to the application of the company to operate 300 cabs on Pittsburgh streets.

A favorable attitude toward the new company's plans has been evidenced by Council, provided it can prove itself financially able to remain in business once it is started.

Max Baer's Own Story of His Life and Loves---Exclusive

Maxie Gets Automobile in Exchange for Contract; Meeting With Olive Beck Leads to Lawsuit; He Wins Bouts, Publicity

MY LIFE AND LOVES—By MAX BAER
World Heavyweight Boxing Champion

CHAPTER V.

When Lorimer heard about McAllister's interest in me, and learned that I wasn't 21, and not under contract, he told me he would give me a Cord automobile if I could influence my father to sign me to him in a guardian contract. That was a cinch. My father signed, I got the car and Lorimer at once told McAllister he needn't box with me any more.

In Lorimer's lawsuit against me later he claimed that he purchased the auto for me out of my funds, at my request.

Ham wasn't so hot as a manager—not at first. He couldn't get me a fight every night. However, he dated me up about 10 days later with Sailor Leeds for a socking party in Stockton, and I put the Sailor to sleep in the first. The payoff for that was $60, of which Ham Lorimer took $20, leaving me $40. And that was the most money of my own that I had handled up to that time.

Gets $100 for a Fight—Rich!

Those Stockton fans recognized talent when they saw it, and yelled for me to give them another look. The promoter there matched me with Al Ledford—and did he surprise me! Al had been around plenty, and knew a lot, and he ducked my swings and plastered me a lot during the first round. I nearly caused a cyclone with the breeze I stirred up when I missed him.

But I hitched the old right swinger onto his whiskers in the second and he called it a night—a very dark night.

Ham collected $100 for my work, and I got $75. And was I rich—and moving up!

My name was in the paper, and people in Stockton began pointing me out. But I wasn't surprised. I knew I was good. I was so good that just about along there, somewhere, I met Olive Beck, the good-looking waitress, and that was one girl that I didn't feel nervous with—then!

A few seasons later it was different. I felt very nervous $250,000 worth of nervousness.

Olive and I chummed around, and we had lots of fun. She was my first girl, and until then I hadn't an idea of what fun a fellow could have with money and a girl. Of course, owing to the fact that Olive was my first girl, and me brimming with sweet words, I sure spoke plenty of them to Olive—which seems to have been a little error.

His First Girl Sues for $250,000

After I got to jogging around California and not seeing much of Olive, I used to write—and that's another error, I should have telephoned.

Anyway, after I was married to Dorothy Dunbar this little Olive ups and sues me for $250,000, and that gives you an idea of what a lover I must have been even during my first affair. Just a "natural," that's all. Romeo was good, so the books say; and John Gilbert has a "rep," and Ramon Novarro, too. And Valentino was supposed to be the old Chili bean kid himself.

But when they loved and lost—or they lost the girl—they didn't get sued. The girls just said, "Oh, well," or something like that, and called it a forgotten incident. But with me, it was different—$250,000 worth.

And just recently a lady I don't even remember meeting hopped into court, and she also has sued me for $250,000 worth of lost love.

Girls, I must be good!

Say, where was I on the subject of my fistic career before I got talking about girls? That's the way it is with girls—they dazzle you, like suddenly walking into the glare of a spotlight.

Matched With Tillie Taverna

Let's see now. Oh, yes, I was matched for a fourth fight. That dude's name was Tillie Taverna. Imagine me, the great big, strong man, being sent up against a Tillie? A guy oughtn't to hit a Tillie! But, there was money in it—$115 for the Baer-Lorimer Company.

Tillie wasn't as soft as his name. He kept out of the way in the first, although I nearly gave him a case of pneumonia from the wind I stirred up throwing the right hand. As usual, I kept the left in my pocket.

In the second, Tillie made an error. He thought I was so wild that I never would be able to park a punch. Came in close, he did. I tossed a roundhouse curve, his left eye got in the way—and there was no more entertainment for the customers that evening.

When I hit 'em anywhere above the neck, those days, with my whole frame in the swing, it used to be "good-night, all."

HANDSOME MAXIE BAER . . . . JUST WHERE HE LIKES TO BE: THE CENTER OF ATTRACTION FOR THE WOMEN FOLK

Fight Crazy; Wants Action

Al Ledford was mumbling around about a "lucky wild swing;" said he would be very much obliged if he could have another meeting with me. I let out a yell to Ham to go get him. And Al was obliged—but not much. I handed him his hypodermic in the second, and the next day, while I was telling how good I was, I made a crack that anybody I whipped once I could whip any day of my life thereafter.

Then who should come snorting along and saying I was a loud-talking fathead but Chief Cariboo. He got his chance, and I shook him loose from his head-feathers with one punch.

Tillie Taverna, I heard, was wishing to meet me again. He didn't believe I could repeat against him.

"Go get him," I told Ham, "and then I'll get him."

Ham got Tillie, and then I got Tillie—in the second.

Business was getting better and brisker. I was getting plenty of action through 1929, but not enough to suit me. I was fight crazy. I'd have fought every night—twice a night—if Ham could have supplied action.

Twelve Kayoes in Sixteen Bouts

I stopped George Carroll in less than a round, took two four-round decisions from the clever Benny Hill—had him down three times, but he had rubber in him. I outscored Natie Brown in six. Natie was a good ringman then. I exploded some dynamite on Alec Rowe's chin in the first; did the same thing with Frank Reyenski, and sheared the beard of Chet Shandel in two.

I mixed it with Tony Fuente, a sly old fellow who was supposed to know how to keep covered up. But if he knew it he didn't show it, because I pitched a right hand, direct from the floor, and that was hail and farewell for Tony.

During 1929—I still was only 20—I had mixed in 16 fights, scoring 12 knockouts, winning three decisions, and I blew the other on a foul. Was I good? Well, the sports writers in and around Oakland and the experts said I was the most horrible specimen of boxer they ever looked at, and a few kept predicting I'd get my brains knocked out sooner or later, because I had no defense, and only used my left hand for hitching up my tights.

Began Yelling for Dempsey

Some of the others—the wise-crackers—merely said I'd get my head knocked off. They wouldn't credit me with brains.

But I wasn't worried. I was good. That voice inside kept telling me that. And every time I'd look at the records, I knew the voice was okay and that the other guys were nutty—not me.

They razzed me, and I razzed them. I kept yelling for Dempsey, Tunney, Schmeling, Sharkey—all the big shots, retired or active—and did I get publicity!

USE HANDBILLS TO 'SELL' IDEA IN SOUTH HILLS

Officials to Speak At Protest Meeting

With handbills and oratory, a group of county officials was preparing today to "sell" the South Hills on the Allegheny County Authority—tube tolls and all.

The group, composed of those active in leading the fight for the Authority and directed by Chief County Solicitor J. P. Fife, began work on their scheme late yesterday in the absence of, and without any official consent from, the County Commissioners.

SPEAKERS AT MEETING

Their plunge into advertising represented a last-minute attempt to forestall the unfavorable and perhaps fatal effect which may result from objections on the part of some South Hills residents to tolls on the Liberty Tubes.

Tolls are necessary in the set-up of the Authority, which seeks a combined loan and grant of $30,000,000 from the federal government for self-liquidating public works in the county.

Further hearings before the PWA on the loan application were contemplated today by Congressman Henry L. Ellenbogen, according to an International News Service dispatch.

Ellenbogen will seek the hearing if the conferences between the County Commissioners and civic groups over the proposed Liberty Tubes toll charges end in a deadlock.

Ellenbogen said his concern in having the application granted is that "we can start thousands of unemployed back to work in Pennsylvania." He scored the report that Interior Secretary Ickes would like to reduce the $30,000,000 application.

Efforts of the crusading group of officials will culminate when they present speakers — among them, it is hoped, a County Commissioner—at the protest meeting in the Hillsdale Avenue School, Dormont, tomorrow night.

Preparatory to the meeting, large handbills will be distributed through the South Hills district beginning tomorrow morning. Some of the distribution will be house-to-house.

VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

The handbills, prepared by Ray Sprigle, County Director of Supplies, give a rough but vigorous idea of the advantages of the Authority loan to the South Hills, and urge all citizens to attend the meeting to hear the controversy threshed out.

Representative Clyde Kelly, (Rep.), of Pittsburgh, said today unless residents of the South Hills district withdraw their objections, plans promising work for 12,000 men are seriously threatened.

Kelly reiterated his belief the Public Works Administration will not approve the loan for the undertaking unless a united front is presented by Pittsburgh and other districts involved.

Secretary Ickes is reported to have indicated he considered the loan too large to be made from the available $500,000,000 PWA funds. Kelly had asserted, however, the Secretary's attitude is the result of protests from South Hills residents against the proposal to levy tolls on the existing Liberty Bridge and tubes.

MEETING AWAITED

In an effort to compose the differences, Kelly said he had communicated with Allegheny County Commissioners who have arranged a conference with South Hills representatives. He added:

"I hope we will get a statement from that meeting to show there is no disagreement in Pittsburgh. We've got to do something pretty quickly or all the PWA money will be allocated and we won't get a cent.

"In the long run, the South Hills people will get a great deal of benefit from the proposed improvement, and they should be willing to waive their protest and pay a small toll to get this thing through. After all, it means work for 12,000 men and the public interest is what we've got to consider."

Moonshine Seized In North Side Raid

North Side police last night arrested Frank Raimondi, 39, of 2008 Lowrie street, Troy Hill, on a charge of keeping a disorderly house at 1710 East Ohio street. They reported the seizure of seven pints of moonshine whisky and a small quantity of beer.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 21.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

You can't beat Oklahoma for originality. Guess you read about the outlaws with a big truck (with a winch attachment on it), backed up to the bank to kidnap the safe. Everybody in town came down to see the show. Due to the outlaws having done no physical work in so long, they wasn't stout enough to load it. But they notified the bank that they will be back right away and that the bank is to have a smaller safe. The future of bank robberies is to arrange some way to charge admission. So many people seeing robberies free, is what's killing the business. Yours, WILL.

KERR PROBING TAG DELAY

City Controller James P. Kerr has sent an employe of his office to Traffic Court to find out what is slowing up collections on traffic violations.

The Controller has been informed that no summons have been sent out from Traffic Court on violations since April. The clerical force, most of which has been appointed by the new administration, has apparently run into difficulties.

The accounting system on the new type of "fixless" tags was originally set up by a force of eight persons from the Controller's office and court employes were taught the methods. Since that time most of the experienced employes at Traffic Court have been dismissed in the change of administration.

As a result the city's traffic tag revenue is reported on the wane and clerical work piling up.

Wins Divorce on Ninth Wedding Anniversary

Robert G. Sproul, Jr., was granted a divorce from Mabel L. Sproul yesterday on the ninth anniversary of the couple's marriage.

Sproul, who lives at 1466 Alabama avenue, Dormont, is a certified public accountant.

He testified his wife used profane language, told him his parents were pests and at one time tore his clothes from his back. His teaching Sunday school, he said, was called a "disgrace" by his wife.

ACTRESS FLIES HERE IN 'JOSEPH'S COAT'

Multi-Colored Wrap Autographed by Celebrities

"Joseph's coat of many colors" has literally dropped in on Pittsburgh out of the sky. With it came its maker, Jean Maize, Hollywood actress.

Miss Maize, wife of Lawrence A. Williams, formerly a Pittsburgh attorney, was "taxied" from Cleveland to Pittsburgh yesterday in a plane privately chartered by her friend and hostess, Mrs. Marie Sampson, 5611 Rural street, East End.

The plane was utilized to permit the actress to prolong her visit here before continuing to Atlantic City to exhibit her unique coat. The coat was designed from bits of gowns worn by famous screen stars and autographed by a host of famous persons.

Ramon Navarro, in putting his signature to it, gave it the name of "Joseph's coat of many colors," Miss Maize explained.

Union Consists Of Alphabet and General Hugh

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Mr. Roosevelt is now a doctor of laws at Yale, for his good work in doctoring the ones at Washington.

The President is following the advice we gave the bankers and brokers in 1929. We advised everybody to go back to college until this thing blew over.

Tomorrow he will watch his son row in the Harvard boat race. The kid made the crew in spite of the fact that we all thought the Navy belonged to the other branch of the family.

Then he trips to Hyde Park and back to Washington. Congress has fled, and, as Senator Borah might say, "there are no more hides left in this park."

Then he goes to Honolulu, leaving Gen. Johnson to defend the union, which now consists of 26 letters of the alphabet and the general.

BOY RUNAWAYS HELD HERE

Running away from a juvenile farm at Wadsworth, O., two boys, Richard Wallace, 13, and his brother, Robert, 11, hitch-hiked to Pittsburgh in search of their mother, who, they told police, was separated from their father in Lakewood, O.

The boys were picked up by West End police at Main street and Wabash avenue and taken to the Juvenile Home in Forbes street while a search is made for the mother, Mrs. Ida Wallace, believed to be living in Bloomfield.

In their story to West End police the boys said after their parents separated they resided with their father in Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland. A short time later, they said, they were given into the custody of the Lakewood Juvenile Home and later sent to the farm near Wadsworth.

Role of 'Big Bad Wolf' Tough on Policeman

John S. Crothers, Sewickley patrolman, today was recovering from the effects of a one-hour marathon during which he chased an escaped pig over most of the lawns that line Sewickley's fashionable Beaver road.

The porker, weighing 200 pounds, freed itself from a truck bound for a provision company in Aliquippa yesterday. It eventually arrived there when the truck driver noticed the absence of the animal and returned to Sewickley in time to unburden the arms of the perspiring policeman.

No matter what the temperature is—zero or up in the 90's—the Woman's Industrial Exchange Board is always arranging some new incentive for the sale of baked goods, needlework, any handiwork of their consignors, all women who must earn money without leaving their homes.

So to stimulate the sale of goods there'll be a sale in Sewickley of Woman's Exchange goods, to be held at the attractive home of board member Mrs. Cyrus R. Miller, of East drive, Sewickley, a week from today from 11 to 5 o'clock.

Mrs. William Christopher Robinson, president of the board, will be in charge with the aid of Mrs. W. L. Jones, Jr., and Mrs. W. P. Snyder, Jr. Mrs. William B. Trainer will be head saleswoman of cakes and candies, all home-made.

Bathing suits, lamp shades and garden decorations will also lure customers at the sale.

Golf Will Dominate Interests Of Golfers Tomorrow and Saturday

Each year the Exchange holds one special sale in Sewickley—usually earlier in the month. But there's been so much going on so far this June that a week from today seemed the first possible day.

Tomorrow and Saturday golfing will dominate the interests of all Sewickley golfers and many from Pittsburgh and out-of-town, too. For tomorrow and Saturday bring the ninth annual women's invitation golf tournament at the Allegheny Country Club.

There'll be golfers of note here from Toronto, from Wisconsin, from Michigan as well as from the East.

Mrs. J. Bernd Rose and Mrs. James M. Schoonmaker, Jr., are in charge of the tournament and the tournament visitors' entertainment.

Shulgold to Have Exhibition At White Sulphur Springs

The W. Eugene Garys have been attending the commencement festivities at Yale. Mrs. Gary's son, John Van K. Douglass, was a member of the graduating class. They all stopped at the Vanderbilt Hotel on their way home from commencement.

July visitors at White Sulphur Springs, Va., will find a bit of Pittsburgh there. For in July William R. Shulgold will have an exhibition of portraits.

Mr. Shulgold, the Pittsburgh artist, who several years ago did a series of drawings of Pittsburgh socialites for the Sun-Telegraph, is a member of the Old White Art Colony at White Sulphur.

Mrs. George W. Crawford, of Woodland road, has opened her cottage at White Sulphur for the summer. Mr. Crawford will arrive next week.

Ellis School Alumnae Holds Picnic at Guckert Home

Picnics, which our grandparents enjoyed, are still in vogue. The Ellis School alumnae held a picnic yesterday—an annual affair—at the home of one of the members, Wilma Guckert, daughter of W. L. Guckert, in Waldorf street, beyond Riverview Park.

New members, girls who were graduated this month from Ellis, were guests of honor.

Dinner tickets for the dinner-dance to be a part of the benefit the woman's committee and the junior committee of the West Penn Hospital will hold in Fox Chapel Golf Club Saturday are scarce.

For the dining room of the clubhouse, one of the largest roundabout, can't take care of more than 400 diners. For the dancing, there's room for ever so many more. And for those who haven't dinner reservations, there'll be a "snack room" to satisfy any pangs of hunger.

Prytaneum Programs Planned

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

"Here will be an old abusing of God's patience and the King's English" says the new year book of the Prytaneum Study Club of Homestead. The quotation is used prefatory to a program on "Modern Slang," certainly a new and somewhat unusual subject for club study. The club's thirty-first annual program is just out and bids fair to provide the members with their customary interesting fare during 1934-35.

Opening on September 25 with an afternoon devoted to "Three Dictators," the women will proceed through the early season with papers on "Explorations," "Fundamental Americanism," "Modern Trend in Housing," "The Menace of the Movies," "Trends in Housekeeping" and "Civilian Conservation Corps."

The one paper given at each meeting is prepared by a member and is always supplemented by one or two others, as has been the custom with Prytaneum for many years. During 1935 such subjects as "Welfare Work-Prevention or Cure," "Informality in the White House" and "Medicine and Surgery" will be heard. Others include "Effect of Sun Spots in the Earth," "Changing Fashions," "Unusual Cities in South America," "Imagination Rules the World," "Radio Managing and Entertaining" and "Changes in Literature."

Officers for the new season are Mrs. M. A. Coon, president; Mrs. G. P. Lloyd, vice president; Mrs. Alice Snodgrass, secretary; Mrs. Port Eckles, treasurer; critic, Mrs. F. B. Woodward; parliamentarian, Mrs. W. F. Nebo, and press reporter, Mrs. J. S. Yeaworth.

News of Club Women's Activities

Iowa Lady Named by B.P.W.

The National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs recently named Mrs. Rosa E. Cunningham, of Des Moines, Ia., as its chairman of legislation. Mrs. Cunningham already holds that office in the Iowa Federation and is also its chairman of international relations. She has been president of her local club as well as of the state federation, all this in spite of her business career and, being left a widow, the responsibility of bringing up her young son.

Mrs. Cunningham began as a public stenographer at the age of 17 and held her job although she had had only two months training. She says that "ladies" in that part of the country in those days had no business training at all and she wonders how she held the position. She was assistant cashier and later assistant manager of the Bell Telephone Company of Kansas, and has held noteworthy positions in life insurance and investment houses and is receiver for a manufacturing plant.

Her interest in her son and her home holds first place. She believes women must strike a true balance between work and leisure, understanding that leisure must imply a building up process, not merely the cessation of work. Business experience alone is not sufficient, Mrs. Cunningham says. Women must have the equipment to understand the world in which they live, socially as well as economically; they must have a clear idea of what they want from life and must find "durable satisfactions." They certainly need poise and mental discipline, she says.

Junior Patrol Mail Box

We like to play the seeing game, fellows.

You can play it a hundred different ways, but we will only tell you about a few of them today, the other ways you can make up yourselves. We first learned to play it on the railroad train. As the train moves along, it stops once in a while at a station. Then all the children who are playing the game look out the window and try to remember everything they see—people, the clothes they have on, the kinds of automobiles parked near the station, the kind of baggage on the platform, and everything else in sight.

Then every one playing the game, while the train is on the way to the next station, tries to write a complete list—to write down everything they saw. The one with the best list wins.

Another way to play it is in an automobile. As the car drives along, the driver says "Start" and drives for about half a mile, when he says "Stop." And then all the children playing the game try to remember everything they saw. But it's pretty hard to write in a moving automobile, usually, and so each player just names his list out loud, and somebody counts for him.

But you don't really have to leave the house at all to play this interesting game. At a party, for instance, you can give everybody a paper pad and a pencil, and then bring in a tray on which you have placed about 20 or more different things—a spool of thread, a button, a shoehorn, a bottle of perfume, a piece of string, a marble, a silver spoon, a clothespin, a nail, a match, a book, a shoe lace, a thimble, a pair of scissors, a fountain pen and several other things.

Everybody playing the game looks at the tray for two minutes. Then a cloth is thrown over it and it is taken out of the room again. Again, the fellow who writes the best list wins the prize.

This kind of a game is not only lots of fun to play, but it does you a lot of good. You will learn to see more when you look. And you will learn to remember more of what you see.

We hope every Junior Patrol member plays this game sometimes. Perhaps your teacher has let you play it in school.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS -:- By PAUL MALLON

Friends and Foes In Army Back Of Foulois

WASHINGTON, June 21. — There is hardly a man on the inside at the War Department who does not believe that Maj. Gen. Foulois was given unnecessarily rough treatment by the House Military Committee.

They feel generally that the case has more behind it than a simple effort to impose justice.

For one thing, Foulois has always acted rather independently with Congressmen. He made no effort to play politics with them as most government officials do. He even criticized this same House committee once because it did by some log-rolling in the selection of a certain air field. In fact, he blocked the committee's efforts.

That circumstance certainly did not encourage the committee to spare the rod when it had a chance to flay him.

POLITICS

More important, however, is the political aspect.

You can never make War Department officials believe that the committee rendered a free non-political judgment. All the Democratic representatives are up for re-election this year. The failure of the Air Corps to carry the mails will be an issue that they must answer. The simplest possible answer will be that they tried to fire the fellow who over-estimated the army's ability to carry the mails. That clears them.

The committee is denying it was influenced by such motives. It can point out that the Republican committeemen joined in the scalping of Foulois, which is true.

But they would have a hard time convincing a jury about their motives, as long as the results of their action will be to free themselves politically.

JUDGMENT

War Secretary Dern is not a particular friend of Foulois. His final judgment may be accepted as non-partisan. Privately he indicated to friends before going over the record in detail that he thought the committee went much too far.

An impersonal opponent of Foulois is Chief of Staff MacArthur. He and Foulois have been conducting a natural inside battle between the air service and the general staff about the merits of the air service in national defense. Of course, MacArthur can say nothing officially about the matter, but you will find that he let the word drop to friends not long ago that if he had been asked whether the air service could carry the mails, he would have made the same affirmative response Foulois did.

EVIDENCE

What really convinces the War Department crowd in favor of Foulois is the fact that the only serious charge against him is that he failed to follow the directions of Congress in awarding contracts. That is fundamentally true, but it was true of Foulois' predecessors.

The Army air people think they know how to buy planes. They like, for instance, to get bombers from the Martins, pursuit planes from Boeing, etc., because each manufacturing is a specialist in his own particular line.

Under competitive bidding they might get some bombers from submarine manufacturers which would perform like submarines.

HONESTY

The only important issue involved is whether the Air Corps officers favored certain manufacturers for less patriotic reasons. No one believes they did. The War Department group has the utmost confidence in Foulois' honesty.

If there is anything wrong with him, they say, it is over enthusiasm for the Army Air Corps, which is hardly an indictable offense.

The White House felt more harshly toward Foulois than any one else, because he failed to live up to his promise to carry the mails.

Nevertheless, there is every reason to expect that the White House will deal less harshly with Foulois than the House committee did.

PASSENGER RATES

Those who know the inside at the Interstate Commerce Commission believe a general reduction in passenger fares will be ordered before long. They expect it to be a rather strong reduction, possibly even eliminating the Pullman surcharge.

The flat passenger rate is now 3.6 a mile. The commission might go as far as cutting it to 2 cents.

The commissioners are supposed to be somewhat irked because some of the eastern railroads refused to co-operate on a rate reduction and plan to take matters in their own hands.

That is why they ordered the recent investigation of the passenger fares.

PUBLICITY

Light killed S 1817. That is the nameless bill which passed the Senate and was on the verge of passing the House before anyone found out what it was about. It would have given Congressmen the right to borrow from the Home Loan and Farm Credit bills.

When Congressmen generally found out about it, they saw to it that the bill was blocked. It was a little too raw to stand the light of publicity.

That also explains the failure of the Senate to pass the House census bill, which was merely to give jobs to census takers who vote right in the November elections.

LEFT OUT

Speaking of publicity, a certain government official here insists on getting his. He recently took a trip with President Roosevelt and was dismayed to find that the morning newspapers did not mention his name. He induced his press agent to call a world-wide news agency here, asking that the omission be rectified in the afternoon editions.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

Mid-Victorian, She Lives In Bohemian Colony

MID-VICTORIAN, and living today. Isn't that a heck of a situation!

Yet a very fine woman feels she is that way . . . And the worst part of her troubles is, she lives in a BOHEMIAN settlement . . . A place where artists and writers and what-not in the professional scheme of things, have habitation.

Miss Brunot

It is a summer town in which she lives most of the year round. And she says that in the winter time when the chill weather seeps in, it isn't so bad, for people foregather for a cup of tea and chairs by the fire. But when the spring comes, and everywhere the up and up spirit gets us, she is much out of line with life.

She has three girls, and everyone of them is in pace with the generation. Having good jobs, and going here and there; and wishing the new age upon themselves with vim and vigor . . .

And all the while the mid-Victorian one hugs her grief; and wonders . . .

SEASON FOR NEW IDEAS

This is the season when we are planning our vacations. Young people and middle-aged people and old people are scheming for a glimpse of new landscape . . . And when is there a more open season for renovating one's ideas. . .

No one individual, sister, can shape the destinies of all mankind . . . Even a Roosevelt has to have a brain trust about him. Even a Hitler has to chose wisely those who will aid and abet him, as well as follow . . . Mussolini doesn't go it alone.

And how can you expect to do it, and especially when you are fostering a regime already worn to a frazzle. . . . We may rejuvenate certain periods in furnishings. Even the very ornamental and highly respectable dressers and tables of the goodly queen who reigned so long in England may return for a time . . . But exactly the repetition of the time accompanying these household pieces. That never returns. And let us be grateful!

It was a Mid-Victorian poet who said that man goes on with the process of the sun . . . Even he saw that. And Queen Victoria chose him for her poet-laureate . . . No group of people can stand still.. Not even the family group . . . Everything changes . . . new flowers, new herbage, new architecture, new ideals all push themselves forward, and the old gives way to them.

YOUNG PEOPLE FINE

The young people of today are great . . . There is something indefinably fine about them . . . They have poise, strength of character, and opinions . . . And, what is more, they aren't afraid to come forward and let everyone know about themselves . . . They get into the press. They get into the very core of things . . . And sometimes, they get into TROUBLE.

But they always get out of it . . . The Great War changed everything about . . . Millions of men perished . . . Millions of women took the dead men's places . . .

Many of those millions of women are now mothers, and their children are coming into young manhood and young womanhood . . . and how, Mid-Victorian sister, can you sit by and expect to get along still hugging your old-fashioned ideas. Girls don't go to bed at half past 10 these summer evenings. Boys drive the family fliver at break-neck speed. There are parties that last until the wee small hours, when morning dew is breaking out like perspiration upon the plant life about us.

There are jobs the next day for these young people. And they are on duty, too, having eaten their eggs and bacon heartily before going to their work.

TIMES CHANGED

There is nothing slow nor compromising about the age in which we are living. We are tearing up old principles that we all swallowed several decades ago and even saying these things aren't ethical.

Politics aren't jogging at the same gait they did a few years back. Homes aren't run as they were when women cleaned house twice a year and sat on the front porch and watched buggies go by . . . Radios . . . inexpensive automobiles . . . newspapers that have pages devoted to womankind . . . Exposure of stock market manipulations and racketeers. Young men and women that say anything at all and fight like the very old devil himself if they are suppressed. A woman given the Pulitzer prize for talking in a novel about things that used to be whispered, and only among women. All these have altered the map of society.

And so, sister, if you still want to be Mid-Victorian, and flaunt your anti-modern thoughts in the faces of your family and friends, go ahead and do it . . . But don't be shocked if you haven't an audience . . . Don't be shocked if you aren't taken into the bosom of your own family . . . Just remember you have been born TOO LATE . . . and that you will not even be remembered . . . for only those who look ahead, and not backwards, get their names into history.

The old people who act OLD, are given a comfortable chair and one of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's books, and left ALONE on the summer veranda.

Not even the family CAT stays with them.

For the up-to-date kitty drinks condensed milk. And likes it.

And Queen Victoria never heard of that.

Miss Brunot will be glad to answer letters submitted to her by readers.

WEEK ENDERS APPRECIATE THE WILD FLOWERS, SAYS FAY KING

By FAY KING

It pleases me to observe that persons going to the country for the week-end do not return with their arms laden with wild flowers they have plucked and uprooted in their thoughtless enthusiasm for nature's beauties.

Was a time, to my sorrow, that I would pick up whole bouquets of these that had been tossed aside because by the time the city was reached the frail blooms had wilted.

Many such have I carried to my little bower to revive them as best I could, for I love flowers, and it makes me sad to see them thrown away, unwanted now, to be trampled underfoot.

I am happy to see that wild flowers are now admired growing, and left to delight other eyes.

By ADELE GARRISON

Boys Disappear During Night

How I kept from screaming at sight of the empty room where Junior and Roderick had been sleeping, and into which Lillian had gone only two minutes before to look for them, I do not know.

Of course, my common sense told me that their absence from the room, where they had been sleeping so soundly, was easily explainable, and that my wild fears, too fantastic even to be defined, were preposterous. But my nerves had been worn to the proverbial fiddle strings by the bizarre events which had invested the festivities of Mary's wedding, and I was ready to fear or to believe anything.

There is nothing so conducive to self-control, however, as the consciousness of a helpless infant in your arms who may be harmed by a loss of self-control on your part. I forced myself to reason that if anything were wrong with the small boys, Lillian, efficient and poised, was already on the job, and, with hands that trembled but did not drop her, I put my baby into her crib, propped her bottle upon a pillow at such an angle that she could not get its contents too quickly.

KEY NOT IN DOOR

With pounding pulses and shaking hands, I made the round of the doors and windows of the nursery suite, seeing that they were all fastened tightly, then, heedless of the fact that I was clad only in bathrobe and slippers, with my hair in braids down my back, I went through the door separating Faith's bedroom from that in which the small boys slept. Locking this door behind me, I went on through the door into the hall, finding it ajar as Lillian must have left it, for there was no other exit from the boys' room save the one I had just locked.

The key was not in the door, I noted, with a fresh access of terror, for I had tested that lock myself upon my last nocturnal visit to the room. And when I had closed it after me and stood looking up and down the corridor, I could see no one, hear no sound.

Then from below stairs I heard Lillian's voice calling softly: "Junior! Roderick! You rascals! Where are you hiding? The joke's on us! Come on out now, Junior! Your mother will be terribly worried!"

Her voice was carefully pitched, so that no one sleeping above stairs could possibly hear it. If I had not been out in the hall, with my ears stretched for every sound, I could not have caught that low, insistent call, which, I knew instinctively, she considered almost hopeless of answer, but was giving it solely that she might overlook nothing in her search for the boys.

She was not standing still as she called. She was passing swiftly from room to room of the lower floor, and I heard little noises which told me that she was peering into every closet. Knowing her thoroughness, I guessed that she had gone all through the corridor of the second floor before she descended the stairs, leaving only the bedrooms in which people were sleeping for the more extended search which she would make if she failed to find the boys downstairs.

RUSHES TO HUGH

She was proceeding methodically and efficiently, and my common sense told me to go down and join her in the search. But I had left my sanity in the room where I had seen empty cots instead of the curled up figures of my small son and his cousin, and there was only one idea dominating my brain—to get more help in my search for the children.

Dicky!

My husband, of course, was my first thought, but Dicky, alas! was five miles away in the hospital. I could not possibly summon him, even if there were time to telephone him.

My father! Yes, I must tell him. But I needed someone in the full strength of manhood, and it was with the feeling of one running with gasping breath to the only person qualified for rescue that I dashed down the hall, pounded upon the door behind which Lee Chow was being guarded, and called the name of the man who once before had brought my small son back to me, and who had more than once risked his life for me and mine.

"Hugh! Hugh! Quick!"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Ingrown Toenail Due to Negligence

Ingrown toenail is a common and annoying affliction. This disabling condition is usually the result of negligence and improper care of the feet. In many instances it can be traced to the wearing of poorly fitted shoes.

Dr. Copeland

It is difficult to understand why persons suffering from ingrown toenail hesitate to take professional advice. Instead, they resort to the use of home remedies and may even go to the extreme of cutting a hole in the shoe with the hope that this may bring about relief if not cure. Too often serious infection may result from carelessness.

If you have ever suffered from an ingrown toenail you can readily appreciate the pain and discomfort associated with it. As its name implies the nail grows into the skin of the toe. As a rule the big toe is most commonly involved but other toes may be afflicted.

Pus may accumulate underneath the nail and then inflammation and infection of the skin follow. When recognized in its early stages, relief can be obtained by pressing the flesh away from the nail and cutting away the irregular and jagged edge of the nail. If you do this, make sure that the skin is first thoroughly cleansed with soap and water. A good plan is to moisten the area with a mild antiseptic solution.

Apply a wet dressing of warm boric acid solution to the toenail. Continue this until the inflammation subsides. It is wise to place a small piece of cotton under the nail. This will guide the nail as it grows to the end of the toe. Repeated trimming of the toenail will eventually smooth it so that irritation will not occur.

Unfortunately, these simple procedures are not always successful, especially in chronic cases of ingrown toenail where pus has collected underneath the nail bed. In such cases permanent cure can be obtained only by surgical removal of the nail. The operation is a minor one and need not be feared.

As I have stated, poorly fitted shoes are responsible for many cases of ingrown toenail. Most sufferers from this affliction are accustomed to wearing shoes that are too small, pointed, giving little support to the foot.

In addition I would advise that the toenails be properly and regularly trimmed. Bear in mind that overzealous attention to the nails may be as harmful as insufficient care. If the nail is trimmed too closely and a sharp edge of the nail is left behind, it will rub against the skin and cause inflammation and infection.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

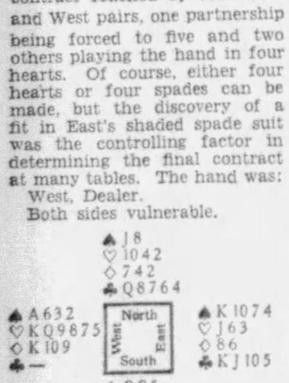
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The Swing of the Pendulum

So strong has been the trend among bridge players to a full acceptance of the Approach principle in bidding that the modern fashion is to greatly shade the requirements for biddability in the suit. As a matter of fact, some players go too far to make suit call when a notrump would be a better bid, but it is now rightly recognized that when a player can find a four-card length in one hand matched by a like length in the other, it is not always essential that the suit be strong in tops.

An instance of this type of bidding was given in the hand below, which was played in a seven-table Duplicate game, the contestants being among the strongest in the United States. Remarkably enough, the final contract reached by four East and West pairs, one partnership being forced to five and two others playing the hand in four hearts. Of course, either four hearts or four spades can be made, but the discovery of a fit in East's shaded spade suit was the controlling factor in determining the final contract at many tables. The hand was:

West, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding at one table went:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡ (1)	Pass	1 ♠ (2)	2 ◇ (3)
3 ♠ (4)	Pass	4 ♠ (5)	Pass (6)
Pass	Pass

1—With a fine six-card suit, of course the Opening bid is obvious.

2—A better bid than one no-trump. East can support the heart suit if it is rebid and can show a preference for hearts should his partner now respond with notrump.

3—South, with his very strong hand, suspects that there is something inconsistent in the bidding. He prefers, however, a Simple Overcall to a Double, as his partner has passed.

4—West is delighted with his partner's Takeout, and does not take the trouble to rebid his six-card suit.

5—East of course reads the Jump in spades as showing at least four spades and so decides not to support his partner's bid, as West may have only a four-card heart suit.

6—South, it must be admitted, showed great restraint in refusing to double. At two other tables the Double was made.

The contract is not at all difficult, the only losers being one diamond, the heart Ace and a trump trick.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Thank-You Notes

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Four weeks ago I was operated on for appendicitis and while recovering from this "experience" have received many beautiful gifts. I would like to know whether I should convey my thanks to these persons by letter, telephone, or in person?

G.

To every one of these kind friends of yours write a note of appreciation of their thoughtfulness and of their gifts. The telephoned thanks appear too casual, and waiting to thank each one in person seems as if your thanks were too long postponed. The notes of thanks will show you an appreciative and mannerly friend.

Showers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it improper for a relative of a bride-to-be to give a shower for her? Or are the restrictions limited to blood-relatives and not in-laws?

READER OF YOUR COLUMN.

It's true that it is not considered in the best of taste for a relative of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be to plan a shower for the bride-to-be. There isn't any rule about it . . . It is thought that such a shower, so sponsored, smacks too much of a too-definite "promotion." However, each hostess must decide for herself about this question.

ALL THE GAIETY that has gone into slippers for the hostess gown or the cabana outfit has been taken over bodily for shoes that will bound around tennis court, over the greens and under the contract table, but the streamline principles of designing see to it that even the Number Eight foot will look well in them, despite their brashness.

ONE OF THE MOST amazing products of this new and lightsome spirit is the Scottish ghillie. For a shoe that began in grain leather, clumpily built for swampy moors, it has gone a far piece of the way. It has taken on the tints of peasant espadrillas, lost pounds of its weight, gone in for flexible soles and allied itself with spectator costumes which sit out games on the club verandah.

There is especially good budgeting value to be had in the open toed sandals made of figured stuffs from the orient or South America—a tip for afternoon and evening costumes.

The frock sketched is for golf, in brown linen with white buttons. The hat is brown felt, and the gloves have brown cuffs.

Marketing to do? That's easy. Let the telephone bring the stores to you!

Minutes count when you need the doctor. No time's lost when you telephone.

The tailor, the laundry, the ice man are easiest reached by telephone.

A telephone keeps you always in touch with the folks back home.

TO NEWLYWEDS ESPECIALLY

It's a big job—making a home. It's more than filling a house with furniture. It takes laughter, friendships, a sense of peace and security. And these are what a telephone brings.

Let the telephone help make your house a home. Every day it will lighten the task of housekeeping—shopping, running errands, getting things done.

More than that, it will help build friendships and make life interesting. To newlyweds that might seem superfluous. But it really isn't. The invitations that come by telephone, the news, the contacts, the opportunities are the spice of life. They are the elements that make happy homes—for newlyweds and others!

* * *

The cost? Surprisingly little! In Pittsburgh you can have a telephone in your home for as little as $2.50 a month (and in the suburbs for even less).

Call the Business Office and say "I want a telephone.

The Service Connection Charge for residences is $3.00 in Pittsburgh; $2.50 in suburbs. Where there is an instrument already installed and no change is desired, the charge is $1.50.

6,000 CHILDREN IN INSTITUTIONS

In a report made public today by the Bureau of Social Research, it was revealed that 6,000 children in Allegheny County are fully dependent upon the community and are being reared in institutions and foster homes. The parents of half of the children are living.

Of the total, about 2,000 are being raised in foster homes, the others being distributed in 36 institutions throughout the county.

The survey was conducted by a force of special investigators under the direction of Mrs. Edith M. Tufts, research associate of the bureau.

The census also discloses that 135 dependent children who actually should be the legal responsibility of Allegheny County are living in foster homes in 25 counties and that some have been permitted to move with their foster parents into other states without any definite guarantees that they would be in good hands in the event something happened to the foster parents.

ALL GASOLINES ALIKE?
DON'T BELIEVE IT!

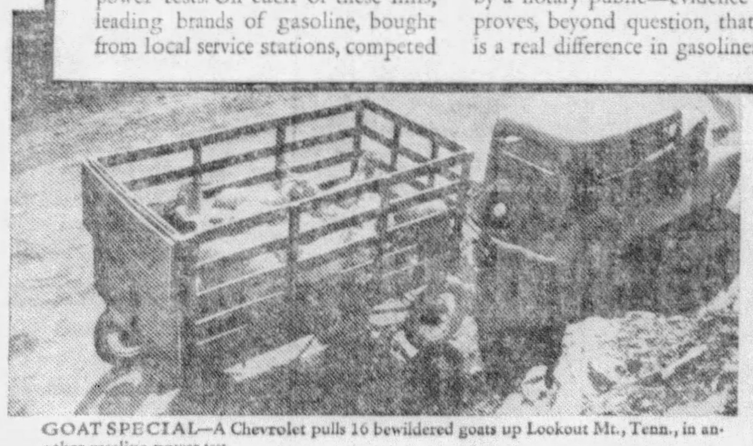
Some people believe there is no difference in gasolines. To disprove this idea, once and for all, Gulf made a series of 12 power tests on famous hills, in which 33 different gasolines competed.

WHAT furnishes the toughest test for the power of any gasoline? A hill!

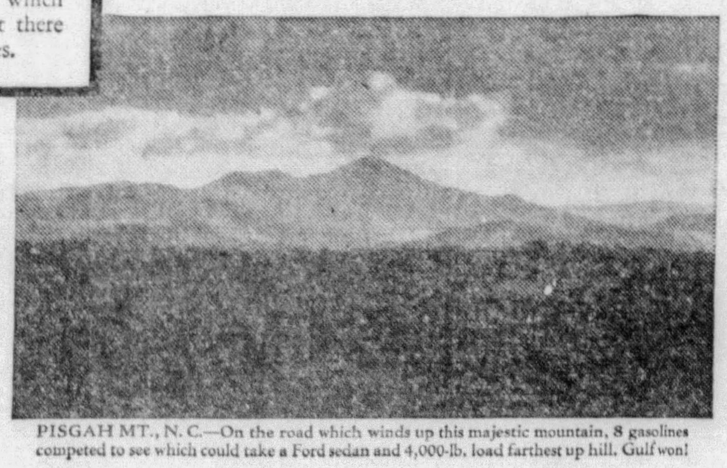
This is why Gulf picked 12 famous American hills as locations for its power tests. On each of these hills, leading brands of gasoline, bought from local service stations, competed to see which could propel a car and heavy load farthest up hill in high gear before the motor stalled.

Here is presented the evidence gathered from these tests—certified by a notary public—evidence which proves, beyond question, that there is a real difference in gasolines.

OFF TO KENNESAW MT.—A 1931 Ford pulls away from a Georgia cotton gin hauling a 3,400-lb. load. Hauling this terrific load, the Ford tested 9 different gasolines on a tough grade up Kennesaw Mt. Gulf won!



GOAT SPECIAL—A Chevrolet pulls 16 bewildered goats up Lookout Mt., Tenn., in another gasoline power test.



PISGAH MT., N. C.—On the road which winds up this majestic mountain, 8 gasolines competed to see which could take a Ford sedan and 4,000-lb. load farthest up hill. Gulf won!

The NEW GULF wins more power tests than 32 other gasolines combined!

HOW 33 GASOLINES RANKED (IN ALL TESTS TO DATE)

All gasolines tested, except a few "third grade" brands, sold for approximately the same price as That Good Gulf. Each brand is denoted by a letter.

SILVER SHARES BUOY STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP)—Some of the silver shares gleamed brighter today and stock market sentiment exhibited signs of improvement.

While there was intermittent activity in some groups of equities, the trading dullness of previous sessions persisted in most departments. Many operators were admittedly out of the market for the time being, apparently waiting for some further motivation from economic or political forces. Commission houses, the majority of which are "in the red" because of lack of business, generally were pictures of gloom.

That stocks generally showed resistance to the usually baleful influence of declining grains were interpreted hopefully. Wheat dropped more than a cent a bushel, reflecting principally hedging pressure. Sugar futures developed strength and cotton, rubber and silver were firmer. Bonds were slightly irregular. Foreign exchanges were fairly steady.

The flurry in the various metal stocks was coincident with a statement by Secretary Morgenthau that provisions of the new silver act will be carried out "enthusiastically." The Secretary also said that buying of silver with general funds of the treasury had begun yesterday.

The spurt of refined sugar to the highest levels since August, 1931, was said to be partly attributable to the operation of the new quota system. Stocks of most of the sugar companies, however, did not exhibit any especial buoyancy, although these had already recorded substantial advances.

Market analysts continued to study the long-range inflationary tendencies shown by recent legislation. Much interest was expressed in reports that Canada contemplates increasing the Dominion's note issue to finance a public works program. If the plans are carried out the country's gold coverage would be reduced from 40 to 31 per cent and, incidentally, it was pointed out that such a step would be a partial recognition of the increased price of gold, although actual currency devaluation, as in the United States, has not been officially proclaimed.

The financial district felt that, in view of the way steel operations are being maintained now that the strike danger is less menacing, some progress was being made in stimulating the heavy industries. A July decline in steel production, of course, is taken for granted, but the belief now is that it will not be as extensive as was forecast a week or so ago. An advance of 25 cents a ton in steel scrap at Pittsburgh was seen as a cheerful omen.

U. S. RECEIPTS AT NEW TOP

WASHINGTON, June 21.—(AP)—Treasury receipts have passed the three billion mark, bringing the collections above the dollar line reached in recent fiscal years.

A statement issued today, including figures up to June 19, set the receipts total for the fiscal year at $3,027,915,576.09.

This included income tax collections of $1,430,862,640 as against $827,499,767 at the same time a year ago.

Collections for the month of June so far also showed an increase, being $91,675,804 as against $75,788,368 in the same period last year.

Total collections maintained a position of slight surplus over ordinary expenditures for the year. With inclusion of emergency expenditures, however, outlays exceeded collections by nearly four billion dollars.

WHEAT SCORES SHARP RISE

President Possesses Confidence

By B. C. FORBES

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT revels in both work and play. Doubtless he will enjoy his holiday tremendously.

Mr. Forbes

He has a mental make-up which amazes everybody brought into intimate contact with him.

Although he has gathered into his own hands vaster power than possessed by any other nation's head, and has at his command infinitely more money to give effect to his wishes, he is not in the slightest degree bowed down by the weight of his responsibilities, responsibilities which would stagger and appall most men.

His closest cronies declare that not even Napoleon possessed greater self-confidence than does Franklin D. Roosevelt, that he has had implicit conviction from the first day he took office that he could master every problem, that he is well pleased with what has been achieved to date.

Also, that the cost, which is occasioning such grave concern among most men of affairs, does not worry him one iota, that he has a super-Napoleonic attitude toward money, born of unshakable conviction that this nation can readily supply whatever sinews may be found necessary to annihilate depression and restore prosperity.

So, he will embark on his long vacation, his friends declare, with all the zest and gaiety of a school boy.

NEVERTHELESS, the President can hardly fail to take time to survey his own and the national record more placidly, more uninterruptedly, more profoundly than was possible during his tumultuous days in Washington.

Unquestionably, he will, upon mature reflection, realize that he and his work will be judged and finally appraised, not by the winning geniality of his personality, not by his honorable intentions, not by his humanitarian motives and aspirations, not by his success in making Congress abjectly obedient to his will, not by the vastness of the powers surrendered to him, not even by the magnitude of his bountifulness to farmers, or the number of millions of unemployed but temporarily to work on public payrolls, not by the lavishness of governmental expenditures in almost every direction.

The yardstick ultimately applied will not be the number or extent of "reforms" instituted, no matter how revolutionary or how idealistic.

President Roosevelt will have to stand or fall by the net effect all his multitudinous activities have on business, on industry, on agriculture, on securities, on employment, on public sentiment.

Unless his efforts lead, in the reasonably near future, to reviving confidence, to reviving business, to reviving employment, to reviving security and real estate values—in short, unless a rational measure of prosperity be achieved, President Roosevelt cannot expect his administration to be adjudged effective, fruitful, successful.

In this work-a-day world, verdicts are based, not on intentions, but on results.

IT'S AN ILL rain that does nobody good.

I remarked to a New York taxi driver:

"You seem happy."

He replied:

"I sure am—it's raining this morning."

"The rain helps your business?"

"Bet your life. I'm lucky if I pull in five bucks when the weather's good. A rainy day is good for nearer 10 bucks."

"What percentage do you get—40 per cent?"

"Yep—and tips, of course."

I asked:

"How has business been with you?"

"It was terrible for a long time. It picked up early last fall. Then it became kinda slow. It kinda livened up again this year, but began to flatten out a couple of months ago and still doesn't have as much zip as it had before. I don't know what's happened; do you?"

I ventured to suggest that the kind of people who used taxis most freely became a little dubious two or three months ago as to how things were to go, and that maybe this accounted for the slowing-down of his business.

He commented:

"I knew there must be something, of course, a lot of rich people leave New York every year when we get good weather. And the rich ginks don't give as many parties or go to as many theaters as they do in winter. But I knew something else must have been eating 'em lately" . . .

He added, as an after-thought:

"There are too—many cabs on the street. I used to make a good living, but not any more. Would I jump at any steady job paying 20 bucks a week!"

Another case of overproduction?

'ADJOURNMENT' STOCK RISE BLOCKED

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, June 21.—The "adjournment of Congress" was, as we anticipated, a flop insofar as the market is concerned. After all, the big question still is, what will Mr. Roosevelt do with all the powers Congress has given to him?

The only significance of the adjournment was the speedy collapse of a feeble attempt to mark stocks up Tuesday morning.

Yesterday's action on the opening was also negative in significance. Prices were mostly a little lower, but this condition was neither pronounced nor universal. As the day wore on there were further small declines, but neither the magnitude of the setback nor the volume of trading suggested any large reaction.

The correct way to look at this market is to recognize it as a professional affair, and as being so thin that nervous movements are easily produced on small volume, but do not gain any momentum.

It seems fair to conclude that no downward trend is yet indicated, despite the fact that some individual stocks have broken below their previous upward trends. The little reaction may easily be explained on technical grounds, and may be thought of as the usual filling of the "gap" made last Saturday. Perhaps this action decreases the possibility that the gap was an "exhaustion gap," and warrants more hope of some further gains.

AVERAGES HOLD

On the bull side, one can say that the averages have hardly broken a conservatively drawn upward trend line.

Moreover, the volume of trading during the past week or so has on the whole tended to run parallel with prices. This observation reminds one that there has really been so little volume that nothing like climax selling can be spoken of, which makes no sharp reaction probable.

Then in the background, there lies all the inflationary potentials, which have long been the main bullish factor. A large part of the President's activities is to consist in spending our money in ways more or less calculated to stimulate.

On the bear side of the argument, one can say that several important stocks have fallen below their recent upward trends, as steel. Telephone and Atchison. Possibly this is also true of Du Pont and American Can . . . Tuesday's setback casts doubt on the stamina of the move, the most active issues leading the decline. The reaction came at a logical resistance level, and other technical indications of a rounding off in the move have appeared. Bonds were off a little, and "the rails" were backward on Monday. (Speaking of the rails, this group is hardly helped by the wage advances soon to go into effect, nor the new pension scheme.)

BUSINESS NOT RELIEVED

Of course, the underlying bearish factor of general business uncertainty is unrelieved.

A little technical reaction to about 97 (Dow Jones) is not improbable. This would not indicate any fundamental weakness. A reaction even to around 95 (to correct the jump made on June 8) would not warrant any pessimism. For example, no change for the worse in the drab outlook for steel is indicated as long as that stock holds above 39¾.

One logical possibility as to market action during the next week or so would be somewhat as follows: First, say, a little dip, possibly completed yesterday. Then, say, a little further advance, perhaps to some such level as 104. Then, if no important news breaks in the meanwhile, the average might easily fall back to a little under 100 again.

Of course, this is just a pipe-dream, but it serves to indicate something as to how I size up the general position of the market—always barring unforseen action by Washington.

PIE TRAYNOR'S OWN STORY OF PIRATES' SITUATION

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Cub Slump Perils Grimm. • Midway Hits Stir Casey.
Strange Form Reversals. New Defense Proposed.
Home-Road Dope Upset. Dual College Captaincies.

In spite of denials from the Cub front office that any change in the management of the club is being considered, the opinion lingers in outside baseball circles that if the slump of the Bruins continues much longer Charley Grimm won't be many steps behind George Gibson in passing out of the managerial picture. The Cub owners have had their hearts set on winning the pennant this year. They went to great expense in buying Chuck Klein and other players in order that their hopes might be realized, and if the combination doesn't soon show signs of winning more consistently under Grimm it won't be surprising if they resort to the usual remedy by making a change in pilots, dropping Grimm in favor of Gabby Hartnett or some other new leader.

Charley Grimm

The Cubs have not played even .500 ball in their last 30 games, losing 17 of them. Once rated the hardest club in the National League to beat at home, the Bruins have won only four games out of 12 in the current stay at their own park, losing two out of three to the Reds, two out of four to the Phils, three out of four to the Braves, and yesterday's series opener to the Giants.

GIANTS WIN ABROAD, FOES SLIP AT HOME

At that the Cubs are not alone in slumping at home. By a strange form reversal, the Bears, the Pirates and the Cardinals all have skidded on their own grounds, just when they were expected to fatten their percentage columns, while the Giants have upset the pennant dope from the opposite angle by winning steadily on the road, just when it was believed they would encounter some serious obstacles. Playing at home, the Cubs have lost eight of their last 12 jousts, the Pirates have lost six of their last eight, and the Cards have lost five of their last eight, while the Giants, since hitting the road, have won nine out of 11.

Despite their recent spell of adversity, the Pirates, thanks to the simultaneous slipping of the Cubs and Cards, were not far behind those clubs after Manager Traynor yesterday paced his men to a victory that broke a five-game losing streak. They were only two games back of the Bears and only three and a half games to the rear of the Redbirds. But the distance they have fallen behind the leading Giants is something else.

WOULD PUT MIDWAY MEN NEARER TO BAG

While his Dodgers were playing in Pittsburgh last week, Manager Casey Stengel talked about the lively ball from a new angle. He pointed out that this season has seen a big increase in the number of balls batted straight back at the pitchers at great speed, with the result that several moundsmen have been injured. Heinie Meine, Owen Carroll, Bill Walker and others were among the victims. Stengel observes further that many of these drives are going past the hurlers and bounding out to center field for safeties, and he believes a check-up would show that more hits have been made on balls traveling over second base or very close to that sack than in any similar period in several seasons.

Casey Stengel

Casey thinks the situation calls for a new scheme of infield defense. He suggests that a remedy might be found if both the shortstop and the second baseman would play a little nearer to the keystone bag than has been the custom. Not nearly as many balls are being batted toward their usual stations as formerly, the Brooklyn pilot finds, and he contends that by standing nearer to the base and thus reducing the distance separating them, the shortstop and second sacker could cut off a goodly percentage of the smacks that are now going through the midway for hits.

CAVALCADE'S TRAINER ONCE FIGHT PILOT

Bob Smith, trainer of Cavalcade, High Quest, Time Clock, Good Goods and the other horses in Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's famous racing stable, had some experience in the boxing game, and more than 35 years ago managed Frank Erne and Sammy Kelly. Smith recalls the time in 1897 when he took Kelly to England for a fight with Pedlar Palmer in Birmingham. For 10 rounds the clever Palmer outpointed the American, and Smith warned Kelly that if he didn't begin to fight pretty soon he would lose the decision. In the eleventh and twelfth rounds, according to Smith, Kelly punched Palmer all over the ring, and with the thirteenth round coming up, the man in charge of the round signs put up Round 17.

Smith protested that it was only the thirteenth round, and when the sign man paid no attention he appealed to the referee. That official said he had nothing to do with the rounds, and ordered Smith to keep quiet and tell his man to fight. "Kelly tore into Palmer after that," Smith relates, "and after knocking him cold in the twentieth round turned to the referee and said: 'Well, there he is. Even if you don't know what round it is, let's see if you can count up to 10.' The crowd was in an uproar, and I think we would have been mobbed if Charley Mitchell and Dick Burge hadn't taken us out of the club through a hidden passageway."

HARVEY DUAL CAPTAIN AT PENN STATE

College athletes who attain the distinction of being chosen varsity captain in two different sports at their institutions for the same school year are not numerous in this part of the country. Many versatile performers compete on varsity teams in two or more branches of athletics, but not all of them win the coveted honor of being selected captain of even one of those teams at any stage of their college careers. And for one athlete to hold captaincies in two separate sports in the same year is unusual.

George Harvey

Penn State elections have resulted in one of those dual leaderships for the next school year, and the distinction of being the only two-sport captain at the Center County college is held by a Northwestern Pennsylvania boy, George Harvey, of DuBois. Harvey will captain both the cross-country and track teams of the Nittany Lions for 1934-35 after starring in the two sports for the Blue and White since he became eligible for varsity competition. He is the first Lion runner to be accorded such an honor in six years, or since Bill Cox, former Olympic distance man, led the 1928 cross-country squad and the 1929 track team in his senior year at Penn State.

New Manager Cites Advantages of a Playing Pilot, Says He'll Strive for Punch and Speed on Team

By Harold "Pie" Traynor

New Manager of the Pirates.

Written Exclusively for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Now that I am a club manager I feel that I can speak out on certain thoughts which a player may hold but which cannot be publicly expressed when he is in a subordinate position.

Without any idea of saying anything to reflect on a bench manager, I am convinced that a playing pilot, especially if he be an infielder or catcher, is nearer the pulse of a situation. For example, he is in a better position to determine when a pitcher is weakening and he can act accordingly.

I could name many instances where infielders felt that a pitcher should be yanked, but when one is without authority he hesitates to go over the head of the man in charge. The latter, if he is a bench manager, may ask the catcher whether or not the pitcher is losing his stuff and he may pull the hurler. The bench manager's intentions are good, but I really think a playing manager has an edge.

These statements do not mean that I will not hold council with Capt. Gus Suhr and other infielders; in fact, I will always welcome suggestions, but I think I shall use my own judgment a lot in handling the boys of the mound.

MANAGER CITES TEAM'S SKILL

In yesterday's article I said I would give the readers an insight on the club as a whole, with some comment on the base-running question which seems to be a hot topic among the fans.

Aside from some battery weaknesses, I believe the Pirates roster is composed of a group of players who can measure up to the best capabilities of any team in the game. We have fine hitters, good base-runners and plenty of hustlers, although I will admit that many of our best scrappers are quiet fighters—that is, they do not pop off like a lot of athletes who may not be nearly as clever as the Buccos mentioned.

We have an infield, I feel, that compares favorably with the best, and when Lindstrom is in action our outfield is as good as the next fellow's. I realize that pitching is the most important factor and I know we are weak in that important division, but I feel sure there will be an improvement here within the next month.

Perhaps our catching leaves a little to be desired, but the receivers are better than the estimate that has been placed upon Padden, Grace and Veltman. If you are patient with us we will iron out some of our battery troubles.

THE "INSIDE" ON BASE-RUNNING

Now I have been quizzed about this base-running slump as it has been called. We are supposed to have one of the fleetest clubs in the sport, but we have stolen something like 10 bases all season. I realize that total of thefts seem a bit ridiculous yet I claim that the more important part of base-running with the lively ball in use is taking the extra base on hits.

If records were kept on the runners who sprinted from first to third and from second to the plate on singles, I am sure the Pirates would be up near the top. Do you realize that we have six or seven players who make a habit of racing from first to third and from second to home on ordinary one-base blows?

Now I ask you that with the rabbit ball in play, isn't there a better percentage in waiting for a hit than in risking a stolen base which at the most may mean only one run? The day of playing for one tally has passed out for the time being and it will be out so long as the lively sphere is used.

SEEKS SPEED AND PUNCH

It is a difficult matter to steal a base on the average pitcher and catcher. Nearly every lefthander make a half balk and gets away with it. The whole thing is so risky it is not worth the chance except on special occasions. I repeat that the percentage of hitting safely is so pronounced that it is better to take a chance on the hit on most occasions, and when you have sprinters most of them will get that extra base. But I still like the stolen base, especially in a low-score game. A theft of third with one out is a particularly smart play.

Personally I think it is a nice sight to see Arky Vaughan, Gus Suhr and several of the other boys race two bases on a single.

I have always been a great lover of speed and punch. The two things are of vast importance in baseball. So I will make no secret of the fact that as I attempt to acquire new players for the Pirates, I shall ask the question:

"Can he run, and can he hit?"

(In the third and final article to appear tomorrow, Manager Traynor will discuss further his plans for improving the Pirates.)

PIRATES WIN FIRST GAME FOR TRAYNOR

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Among the more favorable developments in the Pirate camp today was that concerning a bullpen pitcher who stands an excellent chance of jumping into a first-string berth under the Traynor regime.

Pie Traynor long has held a higher regard for the slab ability of Leon Chagnon than that shared by some of the others in the big Buccaneer family. As this department has pointed out at least a dozen times, Chagnon has more natural stuff than any right-hander on the club. He had some of his skill on display as he did a short relief trick and received credit for the Pirates' 6-5 success over the Boston Braves in the first game of the series yesterday.

CHAGNON STARS

To get back to Chagnon, the sturdy French-Canuck has been a stationary and farmhand member of the Pittsburgh roster for many seasons, but aside from a stretch of two months in the 1932 season he has not been classed as a regular. He was farmed out so many times that Judge Landis finally stepped in and delivered an ultimatum in his case. Each time he went out he made a good showing but he seems to have a dickens of a time trying to get set as a big-league regular.

Chagnon's best break may be wrapped up in the portfolio which has been placed in the hands of Somerville Pie. Pie ordered Leon to the bullpen yesterday and when Red Lucas lost his stuff in the seventh, Traynor held up play to get the relief man on the slab.

Leon retired six Braves in a row, which brought Wally Berger to the plate with one out in the ninth. Meantime, the Pirates had scored two runs, which had given them a one-run lead. Berger had clouted a two-run homer in the first inning and in the ninth Chagnon used extreme caution on him. Perhaps he was too careful, for Leon had a three and two count on the batter when the big fence-buster smacked out a second homer to force a deadlock.

Manager Traynor's individual play, coupled with a like amount of skill and daring on the part of Arky Vaughan, brought Pie his first managerial victory. Pie it was who scored the winning run in the ninth.

GETS THREE DOUBLES

Traynor's third extra-base wallop of the game and his fourth blow of the battle came in the ninth with one out. It was a double. Vaughan was given an intentional pass and then came the winning break.

Suhr hit a slow roller to Urbanski, who was eager to make a double play. Pinkey Whitney was slow in covering and Vaughan made Urbanski tough for him when he stayed upright on his feet. Whitney tried to throw around Arky, and his shot was wide. Jordan didn't handle the ball well and as it rolled a few feet down the line, Traynor sprinted home with the victory run.

Ben Cantwell worked seven rounds and found the Pirates very tough hombres. Bob Smith was on the mound when the mis-play ended the game.

CHILLYSAUCE

Woodie Fesser is playing the ball for the Pirates in the pale week. The catcher defender is expected to get his eye on the sphere at the plate.

Woodie came up in the second inning yesterday and cracked a mighty triple against the right wall. When he next appeared at the plate, he beat out a perfect bunt. Two neat signs of sterling greenhorns.

Bill McKechnie said yesterday he would make an effort to have Rabbit Maranville with his Braves underway on the next jaunt of the Braves to Pittsburgh.

Bad Sickness Bill:

"I just received a letter from Walter who hobbles on crutches. The Rabbit says he has enough bones, nuts and rivets in him to make him last 10 years longer."

McKechnie has recalled Pitcher Dick Barrett from Albany and Catcher Ray Mueller from Harrisburg.

TWO PRELIMS ARRANGED

Two five-round preliminaries have been arranged for the boxing show to be held at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Monday night, featuring Eddie Zivic against Joey Costa, of New York, in the 10-round windup.

Jack Dalcherone, Springdale middleweight, who has been a consistent winner recently, will meet Tom Green, Homestead Negro, in one of the battles, and Farmer Bill Schwerin, of Clairton, will go on with Vic Wickets, of Pittsburgh, in another. A six-round semi-final and one more five-rounder will complete the bill.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

Jack London says that the stories from Wheeling that the decision against Nic Mose Butch in his bout with Frankie Wolfram Monday night was booed were no exaggerations. He claims Mose won all of the way. Incidentally, Sammy Paris beat Lloyd Pine in another bout on this card, which drew a $1,019 gate. It was a milk fund show.

Max Kilig boxes Johnny Gum in an eight-round main bout at Parkersburg, W. Va., next Tuesday night. Dick Ambrose meets Jimmy Columbo and Harry Krause boxes Young Martin in preliminaries.

Al Ettore boxes Popper Stopper and Tommy Rios meets Joe Smallwood in bouts at Leiperville, Pa., tonight.

Jack Dempsey, it is announced, will referee a bout between Tiger Joe Randall and Eddie (Kid) Wolfe at Tinplate Field, Monessen, on the night of July 13.

Believe It Or Not By Ripley

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: ELEPHANT LIGHTS—Kandy, in the center of Ceylon, was formerly the capital of the country. Along with a population of about 23,000, it is said to contain about 300 elephants, most of whom belong to the famous Temple of the Tooth and are used in the procession when the Sacred Tooth of Buddha is carried through the city amid great pomp and ceremony. To prevent the elephants from becoming a peril to traffic, the English authorities ordered that they be equipped with tail and headlights which the animals wear at night in a picturesque fashion.

TOMORROW: A WILLING JAIL BIRD.

Pairings Are Made For Mushball Play

Pairings for the first half of the Western Pennsylvania championship mushball tournament under the sponsorship of the Pennsylvania Playground and Mushball Association were announced today. One hundred teams from Allegheny County are scheduled to play. The games will be played on a home-and-home basis. The first round ends July 3.

GILPIN FORCED TO DEFAULT IN WEST PENN TENNIS PLAY

SEEDED ENTRY ORDERED TO NEW YORK

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Sam Gilpin, of Philadelphia, one of the ranking favorites for the singles championship in the West Penn tennis tournament, now in progress at Stanton Heights, has been forced to default his quarter-final duel with Leroy Weir, of Cleveland, according to the tournament officials today.

Gilpin received word from his firm in Philadelphia last night ordering him to New York to complete a deal. As a result, Weir advances to the semi-finals without engaging in actual combat.

The withdrawal of Gilpin still leaves a strong field in the running for the singles championship and tennis devotees are looking for some spirit competition before the final round is reached.

MISS GRIMES ADVANCES

Miss Frances Grimes, of Morgantown, W. Va.; Mrs. Barbara Duffy, of Cleveland, and Miss Dorothy Anderson, of Butler, advanced into the semi-finals as hostilities in the women's singles division were resumed today. Miss Grimes defeated Flavia Taylor, 6-1, 6-2, and Mrs. Duffy won over Dolly Harris, 4-6, 6-0, 6-3. Miss Anderson played two matches, defeating Margaretta Porter, 6-0, 6-0, in the third round, and Mrs. Charles Code, 6-0, 6-0, in the quarter-finals. Mrs. Russell defeated Miss Mary Code in a second round match, 6-1, 6-0.

Mrs. Jean Artzberger and Miss Anderson defeated Nancy Chess and Nancy Gilmore, 6-1, 6-2, in the first round of women's doubles.

Mixed doubles dueling was to be inaugurated and men's singles battling was to be resumed later in the day.

Yesterday's broiling sun scorched a multitude of aspirants as 36 frays were disposed of in men's and women's singles and men's doubles. Though favorites prevailed in virtually all of these numerous encounters, several narrow escapes were registered, especially in the masculine singles, wherein no less than a trio of highly-thought-of delegates were pushed to the extra-set limit by unseeded opponents.

FAVORITES WIN

Other tilts lived up to the dope, though youthful Bob Madden, of Pitt, gave Sam Gilpin, Middle States pace-setter, a spirited struggle in stanza one before weakening as much under the pressure of experience as of hostile power to lose, 6-4, 6-0. LeRoy Weir, dazzling Clevelander, breezed through two rivals, Joe Madden, of Pitt's varsity, and Maurice Saperstein, of Bridgeville, in brief order.

The nearest approach to a real upset was hung up in the doubles, with Leonard Keith and Paul Graebner, Buckeye combine downed Dr. Billy McElroy and McCook Reed, fourth seeded coalition, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2. Yesterday's summary:

COAST NETTERS PACE FIELD

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—With three Californians in the van, six players have reached the quarter final round of the Eastern Intercollegiate tennis championships, and four more stood in the fourth round bracket.

Of the California trio, only the American intercollegiate champion, Jack Tidball, of the University of California at Los Angeles, had not reached the quarter finals. Arriving late after a cross-country journey, Tidball won two matches in good style yesterday. Despite the exhausting heat he eliminated the Harvard southpaw, Carl Helmholz, 7-5, 6-3, in the second round and Lester Steifberg, of New York University, 6-4, 6-2 in the third.

Gene Mako, the top seeded player from Southern California, and Lester Patterson, of California Tech, were the other Westerners who survived along with seven Easterners after yesterday's 21 singles matches were completed.

HARVARD, YALE TO ROW BEFORE PRESIDENT

NEW LONDON, Conn., June 21.—(AP.)—The quiet, sleepy old port of New London, famed for the part it played in early American seagoing history and the fact that here Harvard and Yale row four miles every year, stirred with excitement today such as it hasn't known in decades. There were but two topics of conversation.

The one still foremost in the citizens' minds was the impending visit of President Roosevelt for the regatta, in which his son, Franklin D. Jr., will pull the No. 6 oar in the Harvard freshman shell tomorrow morning. The other was the startling performance of the Harvard varsity on the eve of the seventy-second meeting of these ancient rowing rivals, a performance that completely revised a situation that previously had made Yale's sprint champions a solid favorite.

In the dusk of last evening the Harvard varsity that hasn't won a race all year at two miles rode a flooding tide down the placid Thames and was clocked in a surprise four-mile workout at 20 minutes, 44 4-5 seconds. This was considerable back of the record of 20:02 made by the 1916 Crimson eight.

Yale's big crew, stroked by the veteran Johnny Jackson and a decided favorite up to today, was content to coast through a light workout yesterday. Yale beat everyone in the East at the sprint distance, but at four miles, which Harvard trains for all year, the odds now favor the Crimson slightly.

BOOKS BATTLE HOMEWOOD FOR LOOP LEAD

It is going to be veteran against youngster in a slab duel this evening at Olympia Park when Homewood clashes with the Book nine in the crucial game of the first-half race for the City League crown.

Flushed with victory over Parmelee last night when Bimmy Steele regained his form to twirl one of the best games of the season, the defending champions eagerly are awaiting the appearance of the Dalzell club. Manager Heinie Boll is sending Leo Carroll, veteran star, to the mound.

Dalzell plans to cross up the dope, and instead of using his undefeated pitcher, Joe Beggs, the Homewood mentor is pinning his faith on Joe Miller, who also has been pitching great ball this season. If Joe warms up O. K., he will get the assignment, according to Dalzell.

While the Books were taking Parmelee into camp last evening, 6 to 2, Beltzhoover turned on the Mt. Oliver entry to score a 5-to-4 decision and the Vaughans slugged out a 12-to-8 triumph over Dormont. Pupich, for the Vaughans, and Davis, for Dormont, each accounted for four safe hits.

Track Meet Set For Hibernian Fete

Track and field events for parochial grade and high school boys, a game of Gaelic football between Pittsburgh and Cleveland teams and a mushball game between Division 7 and Division 8 of the Hibernians will feature the annual Hibernian picnic at Kennywood Park Saturday afternoon.

John D. Holahan is general chairman of the sports committee. He is assisted by Alan Kistler. Gold, silver and bronze medals will be awarded to the winning grade and high school boys in the track and field events. Trophies will be presented the winning teams in the football and mushball matches.

SPORT VIGNETTES

The most captious critics of the regime of George Gibson as manager of the Pirates must have felt a tinge of regret over his passing as they noted the manner in which the veteran "took it" when he moved out of the picture to make way for the elevation of Pie Traynor to the position of boss of the club. Gibby ran true to form in that he accepted his fate without a whimper. He never was a whiner or a complainer, but always a hardy fighter of the old school. His example of sportsmanship in the face of one of the keenest disappointments of his long and honorable career in baseball leaves him today with more friends in retirement than he had while active and those who understand him always were strong for him in victory and in defeat because they knew he possessed these fine qualities.

No happier choice of a successor to Gibby could have been made than Pie Traynor. Unspoiled by success and easy going in his ways, he should provide a stimulus to his players by his very friendliness and should demonstrate that an understanding of human nature and an ability to lead men can be as productive of winning results as a resort to sterner methods. Pie starts off his managerial career with the knowledge that he has everybody with him—the fans as well as the players. He is baseball's symbol of the Man Without an Enemy.

While in New York for the Baer-Carnera fight, the writer ran across Enzo Fiermonte, the Italian boxer who married into society and planned to box Maxie Rosenbloom for the world light-heavyweight title, a match upon which the New York Athletic Commission frowns, and not without reason, in view of the fact that Enzo hardly showed championship qualifications when he was campaigning regularly and has been out of the ring for a long time. As the commission so aptly points out, there are many better and more deserving contenders than Enzo.

Fiermonte is a tall, slim young man, rather good-looking. He speaks with an accent. At the time your scribe ran across him, Enzo was trying to get a check for $100 cashed at the Garden with which to purchase some tickets for the Baer fight. And it was a bulky check book that he carried with him.

Up around Oakmont they're crediting the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph-Oakmont Boat Club Hearst Gold Cup outboard regatta, slated for July 14-15, with reviving interest in water sports to the extent that they are going to have the best camping season in 10 years. That, as Andy would say, is sumpin'.

Bill McKechnie, Jr., of Wilkinsburg, newly-elected baseball captain at Penn State College for next year, turned in his best fielding job in the game with Pennsylvania, which State won, 1-0. He scooped up a wild throw from third base in the fifth inning to prevent a Penn tally. His sacrifice hit in the next inning paved the way for the winning run. He is the regular first baseman on the varsity nine, and, of course, the son of the manager of the Boston Braves.

Western Pennsylvania boasted the captaincy of both the varsity and freshman baseball teams at Princeton University this year. The former was George L. Follansbee, of Pittsburgh, and the latter Charles Lowrie Crawford, of Butler. Follansbee received the Kaeffer Cup for sportsmanship, play and influence, and Crawford the Kellogg Cup as the outstanding freshman player.

The new Motor Square Garden, with its elaborate seating arrangements and other modern appointments, should prove a big factor in the promotion of indoor sports in Pittsburgh. For the first time adequate quarters will be available for big league hockey and major boxing shows.

Grant, Miss Wolf Win at Chicago

CHICAGO, June 21.—(AP.)—Tennis stars from 12 states and Canada, headed by Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, and Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind., were still on the firing line of the Western men's and women's singles championships today.

Playing at his top form, Grant eliminated Max Davidson, of Chicago, Big Ten champion, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, yesterday. Miss Wolf defeated Helen Carney, Shreveport, La., 6-3, 6-1.

MATE IS SIXTH IN GOLD CUP AT ASCOT

ASCOT, England, June 21.—(AP.)—The Aga Khan's Felicitation, an outsider in the betting, today won the 136th running of the classic Ascot Gold Cup at two and a half miles, in which the veteran American campaigner, A. C. Bostwick's Mate was one of the starters.

Felicitation won off by himself, eight lengths ahead of Mr. Crespus' Thor second, with the odds-on favorite, Lord Derby's Hyperion, third, another length and a half back. Mate was sixth. Ten of the leading handicap horses of the United States, England and the continent ran.

Felicitation paid 9 to 2, while Thor, second, closed at 100 to 7.

GEHRIG READY TO BECOME YANKEES' SWAT HERO

LUGGER HITS 18TH HOMER OF SEASON

Associated Press.

With Babe Ruth playing his last season, according to his own word, Big Lou Gehrig appears ready to become the Yankees' slugging hero instead of merely the Babe's understudy.

For the last couple of days Gehrig has been playing with a chipped bone in the big toe of his right foot, but it hasn't interfered with his socking the ball or his 20-man streak of over 1,400 consecutive games. He clouted his eighteenth homer of the season yesterday to bring the Yanks the first of two victories over Cleveland that gave them a half-game margin over the Tigers.

With the score tied in the ninth, Lou rode the ball out of the park to gain a 3-2 Yankee victory and give Lefty Gomez his twelfth pound victory. Red Ruffing followed that up with a one-hit hurling job to win the second game, 4-0, driving in one run himself and permitting only two runners to reach first.

TIGERS BEAT NATS

The Yanks needed both decisions to stay on top, as Mickey Cochrane's Detroit club came through with a 12-10 victory over Washington in an 11-inning battle. Doubles by Charley Gehringer and Hank Greenberg touched off the winning rally after Heinie Manush had struck two Senator homers.

Boston's Red Sox moved into fourth place ahead of Cleveland by slamming out 18 hits and a 14 to 9 victory over the Chicago White Hose. The St. Louis Browns, hitting almost as hard, rocked the Athletics 11 to 3 despite Bob Johnson's twentieth circuit drive of the year.

MUNGO COPS 11TH

Meanwhile the Brooklyn Dodgers battered out a 9 to 5 decision over the second-place Cardinals as Van Mungo, although touched up freely, won his eleventh game of the year. The loss left the Cards five full games behind New York.

After a day in the second division, Pittsburgh's Pirates returned to fourth place with a 6 to 5 decision over Boston, gained when Manager Pie Traynor scored in the ninth on Pinky Whitney's error. Down toward the cellar, Philadelphia and Cincinnati split a double-header. The Reds staved off a late rally to win the opener, 6-4, but yielded, 15-10, in the second slugging match, which produced a total of 34 hits.

SCHMIDT HURLS SHUTOUT WIN

Young Lefty Schmidt, star of the McKeesport slab staff, turned in another fine game yesterday in the Penn State Association as he liminted the Greensburg nine to five scattered hits and blanked them, 5 to 0. He assisted in the nine-run attack launched by the Bucs by hitting a triple.

Charleroi turned on the power in the late innings to pound out a 12-to-5 verdict over Washington's Generals. Charleroi scored seven runs in the seventh, two in the eighth and three in the ninth.

At Jeannette, the Jays picked up ground by defeating Monessen, 9 to 6, in a hard fought struggle.

Boil and Friends Lay Dempsey Low

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—A boil on his finger and too many friends have put Jack Dempsey in Polyclinic Hospital for treatment of the swollen digit and a rest for his weary nerves.

Since Dempsey's protege, Max Baer, dethroned Primo Carnera as the world heavyweight champion, it's been a dizzy round of parties and handshaking for the famous Manassa Mauler, and the merry whirl finally wore him down.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates

To the Sports Editor:

I have no business reading the financial pages, but I've been chuckling about the way the Wall street fellers yelped about the stock market bill. While they were yelping the stocks went down, so, of course, they had something to cry about. They were predicting terrible things as soon as the law was passed, but when the law was passed the stocks started to go up again. That does not make much sense. Maybe the best time to buy stocks is when the brokers are growling.

SHARON, Pa., June 21.—William Groscope, former Sharon High basketball star will enter the University of Pittsburgh next fall. Groscope won his freshman numerals the past season at Miami University.

SENIOR TEAMS IN SOFTBALL BATTLES

By PHILIP GRABOWSKI
Softball Tournament Secretary

Senior division teams again dominate play in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament. The E. J. McAvoys will play the Commercial Garage team at Washington Park in a Bracket V game, the Andersons travel to Greenfield to oppose Fort Black Community in another Bracket V battle and the Commonwealth Trust team is scheduled to tangle with the U. S. Engineers at Tech Field in Bracket I.

Manager John Weinheimer has added Walter Kress, star second baseman, to his roster. Kress will see action in today's McAvoy-Commercial embroglio. James Richards, southpaw of the McAvoys, will pitch. Joe Malerbo has been assigned the catching job.

The Morgan Blue Birds will entertain the J. E. Junior Club in a bracket VII game of the senior division. A large crowd is expected to witness this battle.

The Harwick Red Sox girls team will meet the Solomons in an exhibition game at Braddock. Both teams are entered in the girls' division of bracket I. Mrs. Frances Pitlock, manager of the Red Sox, feels confident of getting revenge.

SOFTBALL SLANTS

All teams in Bracket V of the senior class, who have difficulty in arranging games with the Fort Black Community Club are requested to call Fred Olson at Jackson 1454 Olson is going to play short-stop for that team. Pitcher Haley is going to join the Andersons today.

The Wilmore team won the first game of a three-game series from the Al and Gump Lawyer All Stars, 8 to 4. H. Fostnick and E. Fraser starred for the victors. The second game will be played tomorrow.

Tom Milligan, who handles the Calvary Church team of Bracket I in the senior division of the Sun-Telegraph softball tournament, played football on the Pitt freshman team in 1930 and was a track man for four years on the Pitt track team, Milligan is the director of athletics for the Calvary Church organization.

Coach Milligan's team has been playing a fine game of softball. Little Dickie Boyles, who has been starring at third base for the Calvary team, is Milligan's real performer. Boyles is only 19 years old and weighs 191 pounds, but despite his height and weight he is the team's home run hitter. In every game played by the church team, Dickie has hit a homer. He is a real spark plug on the field. According to Coach Milligan, the youngster is an all-round athlete. He attends Peabody High School. Boyles was responsible for the triple play scored by his team against the St. Faustina team in the Calvary-St. Faustina contest. Boyles hit a home run with the bases loaded.

Dick Patterson, lightsitter on the Calvary team, played guard on last year's Peabody High School football team, which won the city championship by defeating South Hills.

Teams in the 15-18 year-old class desiring games at home should call Tom Milligan, coach of the Calvary team, at

PITT GOLFERS TO GO AFTER TEAM TITLE

By TOM BIRKS

The University of Pittsburgh's crack golf team, tri-state district varsity champion, is expected to cut no small figure in the annual National Intercollegiate tournament, scheduled to get under way over the Cleveland Country Club links, Cleveland, next Monday morning.

The showing of the Panther squad this season was brilliant, and while one hardly would pick the Blue and Gold to win the team title, there is every reason to believe that Regis Wolff and his mates will make a good showing.

Pitt will send the entire squad of Regis Wolff, Claude McKee, Charley Matthews and Johnny Wasco to the tourney. The squad leaves on Sunday morning.

QUALIFY AUGUST 21

The local qualifying round of the national amateur tourney will be played over the links of the Oakmont Country Club August 21. Two Pittsburghers, former champions, W. C. Fownes, Jr., and S. Davidson Herron will be among those exempt from qualifying.

Another golf veteran stepped into the limelight yesterday at the Pittsburgh Field Club when Jimmy Lappan, club champion, and winner of many tournaments in this district, tied the amateur course record of 70 to win the second Pennsylvania State one-day tourney. The course record is 69, held by Vince Eldred. Lappan should have tied that score. Coming to the eighteenth tee the veteran needed a par four for a 69. His drive was perfect, but he half topped his second shot, and the ball skidded across the green into the rough. His first chip was short, but his second attempt left the ball three inches from the pin.

Herb Miller, the Aliquippa star, and Tom Canon, of St. Clair, tied for second honors with 75s. Dick Boucek, of Highland, had a 77.

OPEN TOURNEY PARLEY HERE TOMORROW

President H. C. Fownes and the Board of Governors of the Oakmont Country Club will meet tomorrow morning to consider the offer of the Tournament Committee of the United States Golf Association to hold the 1935 National Open championship over the course of the Oakmont Club. That the committee's report will be favorable is forecast in golf circles. The U. S. G. A. is considering a plan of limiting the open tourney sites to five courses of championship caliber. The famous Hulton layout is one of the five that probably will hold the major tourney once every five years.

It is probable that the five-course plan will go into effect next year, at which time the other four courses in the select group will be named.

The 1935 tourney, if reported favorably by the committee, will be the second open tourney to be staged at Oakmont. Tommy Armour won the title here in 1925. The National Amateur was held at Oakmont in 1919 and 1927, while the P. G. A. championship also has been decided over the famous Hulton links.

GOLF CHAMPS EXEMPTED

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—Instead of only the defending titleholder, 15 former holders of the national amateur golf championship, or as many of them as choose to enter this year's event, and W. Lawson Little, 1934 winner of the British amateur, will be permitted to sit on the sidelines this year when their rivals struggle through the sectional qualifying rounds on 24 courses August 21.

The United States Golf Association yesterday decided to exempt all former champions, from 78-year-old Charles B. MacDonald, won won the first tournament in 1895, to George Terry Dunlap, Jr., the 1933 winner, with the sole exceptions of Bobby Jones, Jerome Travers and George Von Elm. These three are no longer amateurs.

In addition to MacDonald, who said he would not be able to take advantage of the officials' consideration because of his eye, the exempted men are H. J. Whigham, Findlay S. Douglas and I. N. James, of New York; H. Chandler Egan, Medford, Ore.; Robert Gardiner, Chicago; William C. Fownes, Jr., Pittsburgh; Francis Ouimet, Boston; Chick Evans, Chicago; S. Davidson Herron, Pittsburgh; Jesse Guilford, Boston; Jess Sweetser, New York; Max Marston, Philadelphia; Harrison (Jimmy) Johnston, Minneapolis, and C. Ross Somerville, London, Ontario.

The tournament, to be on an all-match play basis this year for the first time since 1903, will be played at the Country Club, Brookline, Mass., in September. The courses chosen for the sectional qualifying rounds, which will reduce the field to 178, follow:

Rhode Island Country Club; Barrington, Ridgewood, N. J.; C. C.; Baltimore C. C.; Philadelphia Cricket Club; Atlantic A. C., Brookhollow; Red Lion C. C., Dallas; Oakmont, Pa.; C. C. Elyria, O.; C. C., Somerset C. C.; St. Paul; Normandie C. C., St. Louis; Kansas City C. C.; Cherry Hills Club, Denver; Wilshire C. C., Los Angeles; San Francisco G. C., Portland, Ore.; G. C., Omaha Field Club; Miami Valley G. C., Dayton, O.; Niagara Falls C. C.; Belle Meade C. C., Nashville; Tulsa C. C.; Waialae C. C., Honolulu; Dubsdread G. C., Orlando, Fla.; Detroit C. C., and Oak Park, Ill., C. C.

WOMEN'S GOLF TEAM CHOSEN

NEW YORK, June 21.—(AP.)—John G. Jackson, senior vice president of the United States Golf Association, announced today that eight women golfers, headed by Virginia Van Wie, the National champion, had been invited to play on an American team against a British side in the Curtis Cup matches to be played September 27 and 28 at the Chevy Chase Club near Washington, D. C.

The other candidates for the team are Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J.; Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City; Mrs. Leona D. Cheney, of Los Angeles; Charlotte Glutting, of South Orange, N. J.; Lucille Robinson, of Des Moines, Ia.; Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare and Anelia Gorczyca, of Fort Worth, Tex.

COURTESY OF THE ROAD TO YOU

THE Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association sets forth the following as a courtesy guide to the operators of the trucks owned by members of the Association:

The Three "C's" of the Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association:
COURTESY . . . to other highway users.
CONSIDERATION . . . for his share of the highway.
CO-OPERATION . . . with the people who have helped build our highways.

1. Always keep to the right side of the highway and pull as far to the right side of the road as possible to allow clear passage for passing vehicles. When making deliveries park next to curb, avoid traffic congestion. Park twenty-five feet back of intersection next to curb.

2. Even though you may have legal right of way, let the other driver have it when appearances indicate possibility of an accident.

3. Be especially careful when passing schools or places where children are at play, remembering that the public will condemn you in the event of an accident, no matter how blameless you may be.

4. Stop at STOP signs. Most accidents occur at intersections. Stop signs are effective twenty-four hours a day.

5. Be especially courteous at times when traffic is unusually heavy, giving every benefit of doubt to operators of passenger vehicles.

6. When it becomes necessary to leave your truck unattended, shut off your engine and set your emergency brakes; place in low gear; never stop on curves, at the crest of a hill, or at any point where traffic cannot see your vehicle from all directions; at all times have red lanterns for night and red flags for day in the event of emergency stops, placing them at least 200 feet to the front and rear of your vehicle. When vehicle (two ton or more capacity) is disabled you must burn flares at night.

7. Observe the slogan of the Governor's Committee on Street and Highway Safety—"Take Time to Be Safe," and keep 300 feet apart.

8. Take long turns at intersections, short turns often result in accidents.

9. Change to low gear from a full stop when about to descend a steep grade; take no chances on your vehicle getting beyond control.

10. Difficult as it may be, try to listen quietly when the impatient owner of a passenger car calls you down for some real or imagined discourtesy or infraction of highway regulations. If you are wrong, apologize; if you are right, apologize just the same.

The Thin Man

By DASHIELL HAMMETT

"What do you think of it?" Macaulay asked in a low voice.

"When I start believing Mimi," I said, "I hope I have sense enough not to admit it."

She returned from the door with Guild and Andy. Guild nodded to me and shook hands with Macauley, then turned to Mimi and said: "Well, ma'am, I'll have to ask you to tell—"

Macauley interrupted him: "Suppose you let me tell what I have to tell first, lieutenant. It belongs ahead of Mrs. Jorgensen's story and—"

Guild waved a big hand at the lawyer. "Go ahead." He sat down on an end of the sofa.

Macaulay told him what he had told me that morning. When he mentioned having told it to me that morning Guild glanced bitterly at me, once, and thereafter ignored me completely. Guild did not interrupt Macaulay, who told his story clearly and concisely. Twice Mimi started to say something, but each time broke off to listen. When Macaulay had finished, he handed Guild the note about the bonds and check. "That came by messenger this afternoon."

Guild read the note very carefully and addressed Mimi: "Now then, Mrs. Jorgensen."

She told him what she had told us about Wynant's visit, elaborating the details as he patiently questioned her, but sticking to her story that he had refused to say a word about anything connected with Julia Wolf or her murder, that in giving her the bonds and check he had simply said that he wished to provide for her and the children, and that though he had said he was going away she did not know where or when. She seemed not at all disturbed by everybody's obvious disbelief. She wound up smiling, saying: "He's a sweet man in a lot of ways, but quite mad."

Thinks He's Insane

"You mean he's really insane, do you?" Guild asked; "not just nutty?"

"Yes."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, you'd have to live with him to really know how mad he is," she replied airily.

Guild seemed dissatisfied. "What kind of clothes was he wearing?"

"A brown suit and brown overcoat and hat, and I think brown shoes and a white shirt and a grayish necktie with either red or reddish brown figures in it."

Guild jerked his head at Andy. "Tell 'em."

Andy went out.

Guild scratched his jaw and frowned thoughtfully. The rest of us watched him. When he stopped scratching, he looked at Mimi and Macaulay, but not at me, and asked: "Any of you know anybody that's got the initials D. W. Q.?"

Macaulay shook his head from side to side slowly.

Mimi said: "No. Why?"

Guild looked at me now. "Well?"

"I don't know them."

"Why?" Mimi repeated.

Guild said: "Try to remember back. He'd most likely've had dealings with Wynant."

"How far back?" Macaulay asked.

"That's hard to say right now. Maybe a few months, maybe a few years. He'd be a pretty large man, big bones, big belly, and maybe lame."

Macaulay shook his head again. "I don't remember anybody like that."

Body Under Floor

"Neither do I," Mimi said, "but I'm bursting with curiosity. I wish you'd tell us what it's all about."

"Sure, I'll tell you." Guild took a cigar from his vest pocket, looked at it, and returned it to the pocket. "A dead man like that's buried under the floor of Wynant's shop."

I said: "Ah."

Mimi put both hands to her mouth and said nothing. Her eyes were round and glassy.

Macaulay, frowning, asked: "Are you sure?"

Guild sighed. "Now you know that ain't something anybody would guess at," he said wearily.

Macaulay's face flushed and he smiled sheepishly. "That was a silly question. How did you happen to find him—it?"

"Well, Mr. Charles here kept hinting that we ought to pay more attention to that shop, so, figuring that Mr. Charles here is a man that's liable to know a lot more things than he tells anybody right out, I sent some men around this morning to see what they could find. We'd give it the once over before and hadn't turned up nothing, but this time I told 'em to take the dump apart, because Mr. Charles here had said we ought to pay more attention to it. And Mr. Charles here was right." He looked at me with cool unfriendliness. "By and by they found a corner of the cement floor looking a little newer maybe than the rest and they cracked it and there was the mortal remains of Mr. D. W. Q. What do you think of that?"

Macaulay said: "I think it was a damned good guess of Charles'." He turned to me. "How did you—"

Guild interrupted him. "I don't think you ought to say that. When you call it just a guess, you ain't giving Mr. Charles here the proper credit for being as smart as he is."

Macaulay Puzzled

Macaulay was puzzled by Guild's tone. He looked questioningly at me.

"I'm being stood in the corner for not telling Lieut. Guild about our conversation this morning," I explained.

"There's that," Guild agreed calmly, "among other things."

Mimi laughed, and smiled apologetically at Guild when he stared at her.

"How was Mr. D. W. Q. killed?" I asked.

Guild hesitated, as if making up his mind whether to reply, then moved his big shoulders slightly and said: "I don't know yet, or how long ago. I haven't seen the remains yet, what there is of them, and the medical examiner wasn't through the last I heard."

"What there is of them?" Macaulay repeated.

"Uh-huh. He'd been sawed up in pieces and buried in lime or something so there wasn't much flesh left on him, according to the report I got, but his clothes had been stuck in with him rolled up in a bundle, and enough was left of the inside ones to tell us something. There was part of a cane, too, with a rubber tip. That's why we thought he might be lame, and we—" He broke off as Andy came in. "Well?"

Andy shook his head gloomily. "Nobody sees him come, nobody sees him go. What was that joke about a guy being so thin he had to stand in the same place twice to throw a shadow?"

I laughed—not at the joke—and said: "Wynant's not that thin, but he's thin enough, say as thin as the paper in that check and in those letters people have been getting."

"What's that?" Guild demanded, his face reddening, his eyes angry and suspicious.

Wynant Dead

"He's dead. He's been dead a long time except on paper. I'll give you even money they're his bones in the grave with the fat lame man's clothes."

Macaulay leaned towards me. "Are you sure of that, Charles?"

Guild snarled at me: "What are you trying to pull?"

"There's the bet if you want it. Who'd go to all that trouble with a corpse and then leave the easiest thing of all to get rid of—the clothes—untouched unless they—"

"But they weren't untouched. They—"

"Of course not. That wouldn't look right. They'd have to be partly destroyed, only enough left to tell you what they were supposed to tell. I bet the initials were plenty conspicuous."

"I don't know," Guild said with less heat, "They were on a belt buckle."

I laughed.

Mimi said angrily: "That's ridiculous, Nick. How could that be Clyde? You know he was here this afternoon. You know he—"

"Sh-h-h. It's very silly of you to play along with him," I told her. "Wynant's dead, your children are probably his heirs, that's more money than you've got over there in the drawer. What do you want to take part of the loot for when you can get it all?"

"I don't know what you mean," she said. She was very pale.

Macaulay said: "Charles thinks Wynant wasn't here this afternoon and that you were given those securities and the check by somebody else, or perhaps stole them yourself. Is that it?" he asked me.

"Practically."

"But that's ridiculous," she insisted.

Synopsis

Nick Charles, noted detective, who tells the story of "The Thin Man," and Nick's wife, Nora, meet Dorothy Wynant, daughter of a former client, in a speakeasy. Herbert Macaulay, Wynant's attorney, tells Nick; Mimi, Wynant's divorced wife, is hunting Wynant.

Next day Nick reads of the murder of Julia Wolf, Wynant's secretary. Mimi found the body when she went to get Wynant's address.

While a Mr. Norman is telephoning to Nick a loud report as of a shot is heard and his words end abruptly.

It is learned Julia was a racketeer's sweetheart.

Dorothy gives Nick a gun which she says she got in a speakeasy. Morelli, a gangster suspected in Julia's murder, shoots Nick.

Police find Dorothy's automatic in Nick's apartment. Julia served time for working badger game. Guild tells Nick. Wynant's letter urges Nick hunt slayer. Nick convinced that Mimi is hiding evidence. Morelli tells Nick life story of Julia. Nick arrives as police are quizzing Mimi. Dorothy tells Nick brother is seeing father. Macaulay says he saw Wynant near murder scence. Guild quizzes Nick. Wynant leaves money for Mimi.

Don't pucker the lips when applying coloring substances, we implore you. Lips have fine creases. Unless they are stretched flat and smooth the rouge will touch only the top surface, and the effect will be patchy.

If the mouth is large, do not place the tint clear to the ends or the edges. When it is small, have the application lighter in the center.

There's a tendency now to get away from Chinese red and orange tones. Deeper shades are popular, more natural looking.

ONE TUBE RADIO RECEIVING SET—THE REGENERATIVE CIRCUIT

Above left: The antenna is coupled by transformer to oscillating circuit. "Tuning" to different wavelength is done by adjusting position of secondary coil and changing capacity of variable condenser. Filament of triode valve (vacuum tube) is heated by 6-volt "A" battery regulated by rheostat (adjustable resistance).

Grid is connected to secondary coil through a condenser—plate to 22½ volt "B" battery, also through a condenser. Fluctuations in grid potentials result in pulsating current in plate circuit, producing sound in telephone receivers.

Above right: The regenerative circuit. The plate current is led through a tickler coil, in the field of the secondary coil, boosting the current in the grid circuit, which in turn magnifies the plate circuit. As result, stronger sounds are produced in telephone receivers. (Communication)

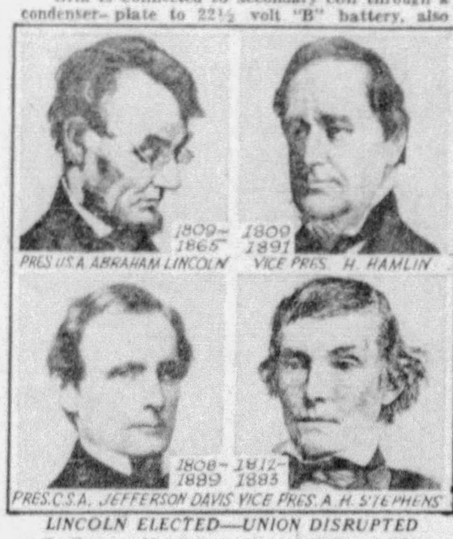
THIRTY YEARS WAR—ITS CAUSES—ITS BEGINNING

The Protestant denominations, Calvinists and Lutherans, became disunited in Germany over privileges granted in the Treaty of Augsburg (1555), strengthening the Catholics who had Habsburg's support.

German princes sought independence; Habsburg emperors wanted a whole Germany under their control; thus religious and political ambitions caused the Thirty Years War.

It started (May, 1618) with the hurling of two Catholic representatives of the Habsburg Crown from a window at Prague, illustrated by above painting. Denmark, Sweden, Spain, France, indirectly also England were soon involved. The war wrought terrible destruction, especially to Germany's political, economic, intellectual, moral life.

The Treaty of Westphalia (1648) closed the war, putting Calvinists and Lutherans on equal footing; but it destroyed the unity of the empire, weakened the central authority, leaving France most powerful in Western Europe. (World History)



LINCOLN ELECTED—UNION DISRUPTED

In the presidential election of 1860 candidates on four tickets competed: Northern Democrats, Constitutional party (consisting of old "Whigs" and "Know Nothing") and Republicans.

In this complex campaign Abraham Lincoln was elected President, with Hannibal Hamlin, Vice President, on the Republican ticket.

The result convinced the slave holding South that there was no place for them in an anti-slavery Union. South Carolina, ordering a state convention, declared secession, December 20, 1860, followed by a chain of other southern states.

Delegates of the southern states formed a provisional government of the "Confederate States of America," Feb. 18, 1861, electing Jefferson Davis their President and Alexander H. Stephens Vice President.

James Buchanan, yet in office as President of the United States, made feeble efforts to effect a compromise. The southern leaders in contrast organized rapidly and efficiently, seizing U. S. arsenals, preparing to crush a Union interference. These were the preludes to the Civil War (1861-65). (U.S. Hist.)

REGENERATIVE RECEIVERS—AMPLIFICATION, LOUDSPEAKER—ELECTRIC EYE

In a regenerative radio receiving set (above left) the secondary circuit of the transformer (the primary is connected with the antenna) is led through a condenser to the grid of first thermionic tube, which becomes alternately + or —, admitting or repulsing electrons shooting from heated filament to plate. Accordingly, current flows or ceases in plate circuit, which, led through a "tickler" coil, will boost grid—also plate—current (regeneration). Connecting the plate circuit through a transformer with the grid and filament of a second thermionic tube, the plate current of the second tube will be an amplification of that of the first. Both, high frequency (radio) and low frequency (audio, sound-producing) oscillations can be amplified.

In the loudspeaker, the plate current energizes an electromagnet which vibrates a moving coil, connected to a paper cone, producing sound.

The "electric eye," or photo-electric cell, consists of a tube with low pressure argon gas having a potassium-coated silver layer as — electrode (cathode) and a ring formed wire as + electrode (anode). If light strikes potassium, electrons are ejected, ionizing argon, which becomes conductive and current can pass from a battery connected to the electrodes. (Communication)

DYING QUEEN ELIZABETH

Elizabethan England experienced the Renaissance and Reformation. Besides fostering art, literature, science, commerce, Queen Elizabeth inspired patriotism. She died 1603 and was succeeded by James I, King of Scotland, a Catholic. As believer in "Divine Right" and Absolutism, unsuccessful in wars, he made himself very unpopular. His rule laid the germ of England's civil war that culminated in beheading of his son King Charles I (1648).

TALKING PICTURE—REPRODUCTION OF LIGHT AND SOUND

The "talkie film" has picture—and sound—record produced at the same moment. A light gate is operated by pulsating electric current modulated by sound through a microphone, admitting more or less light according to sound vibrations, photographed together with the scene on the edge of film. The "sound track" gives stripes of different density and length (left).

Directing light through these stripes upon photo-electric cell this will admit pulsating current sent amplified to loudspeaker, reproducing the sound that had operated the light gate. (Science)

"SEEING" OVER WIRE OR RADIO (Television)

In a television apparatus (above) light is admitted through holes over a revolving (scanning) disc, and is thrown upon each point of the scene in quick succession. The admitted light, reflected from scene, illuminates photo-electric cell (electric eye), which sends out pulsating current corresponding to the received light. This current is then amplified by vacuum tubes and transmitted by wire or combined with a carrier radio wave by a short wave radio transmitter.

Receiving apparatus picks up the impulses, amplifies and sends them to a neon tube (containing rarefied neon gas) that glows brighter or dimmer according to the current received.

Looking upon the neon tube through holes of a scanning disk, synchronized with the scanning disc of the transmitter, same light impressions are received as reflected by scene. The received numerous light impulses (as many details in quick succession) combine in the eye of the observer into a whole picture of the scene. (Communication)

A Word For the Broker

A Wall street broker cornered us the other day and said: "You've been writing about Wall street for years. What do you know about it?"

"Nothing," we said. "Shake," he says, "I'm in the same business."

And that's what they all say. The government has protected the investor. But the broker still leads with his blindfolded chin.

The investor is a man who's burning a hole in his pockets and who refuses to wear asbestos pants. You can't protect the mugg like you would a big league catcher. Shin guards, bullet-proof vests and big gloves are no good for a weak spot between the ears. There's going to be gambling so long as crows like corn. And that's longer than the Mississippi.

You cannot keep the small investor out of the tournament of margins any more than you can stop cold air with a screen door.

The man with a fiver wants to make it 10. And when you guess right Wall street pays off like a soldier at the company canteen. Ten will get you 20 and 20 will get you steamed up like clams at a shore dinner. After that, you think you have the world by the red ears. It's gambling.

Many states have legalized horse racing. Therefore you cannot pinch a stock plunger if he has a dope sheet of blue-ribbon stocks in one hand and a bag of oats in the other. It's the old intrepid spirit of the pioneer. He wants to see what's over the hill if it's only the poorhouse. There ain't a man in this lopsided universe who won't tumble for a game of skill and chance if he thinks he can win. Like the little boy with the big bass drum he thought he could beat it. But he couldn't carry it.

We are for any law that will slap the dampers on gambling. It's a bad habit. But what's the use of trying to wallpaper the moon? The bourses are as old as history and man will plank a bet on anything within reach and throw snowballs at the rest.

While protecting the sucker don't forget the brokers have also been dressing neatly and gaudily in sackcloth and cinders. Since 1929, they have grounded their yachts, repainted their limousines and stayed home with the family at night. Three of the finest brands of suffering known to the street.

Let's get our intelligent and sloping skulls together and figure out a law that will protect the investor and the broker too. If there ain't something alive on both ends of the line then it ain't fishing.

ODD FACTS

During the past season Australia is reported to have sent to England "1,850,000 long hundreds" of eggs. A long hundred means 120, and the only reason one can imagine that the hundred is lengthened in this confusing way for counting eggs is that one instinctively thinks of eggs in dozens, and 120 are 10 dozen.

At the present rate of progress there will be as many deaths as births in England and Wales in 1938.

There were 82,006 fewer trans-Atlantic steamship passengers last year than in 1931.

The prairies of Canada can no longer be regarded as "treeless plains," for 117,000,000 young trees have been distributed for planting since 1901. As many as 4,000,000 seedlings are distributed to Canadian farmers in a single year for planting to form wind breaks.

The galleries of the Catacombs in Rome are estimated to be some 600 miles in length—mostly unexplored.

By lighting and heating a beehive by electricity the output of honey has been increased by as much as 17 pounds.

New Exposition Hall

Council Delays Approval of Plan and Studies Motor Square Garden Competition.

City Council tabled the proposed 50-year lease of the Exposition Hall site at the Point to the Greater Pittsburgh Exposition Society, following the announcement of plans to build a new Motor Square Garden. A public hearing in the matter was held yesterday.

The city's return, under the proposed lease, would depend on a share in the receipts. Naturally, the existence of competition from a modern building of similar nature, also to be devoted to sports, exhibitions and conventions, threatens to reduce the city's return.

The delay will give time for a study of the probable influence of the new Motor Square Garden. It will permit serious consideration of the question: Can Pittsburgh support two such institutions?

From the standpoint of location, accessibility to hotels, railroad and motor coach terminals, and parking facilities, the Point is much to be preferred to the East End location. Citizens from the South Hills, North Side and West End could reach the Point much more readily. But if private interests are determined to erect a new building at the site of Motor Square Garden, a decision to spend the money involved must have been reached only after the most careful study of possible returns upon investment. The apparent determination to erect this building there indicates need for caution before the city commits itself to a similar enterprise. This caution the City Council is wisely providing.

Improvements Jeopardized

Some Justice on Both Sides of Tube Toll Controversy; Sensible Compromise Possible.

The conflict between the County Commissioners and residents of the South Hills over whether tolls shall be placed on the Liberty Tubes to liquidate the Authority funds sought from the federal government is jeopardizing the whole program of projected public improvements for the county.

There is some justice on both sides of the controversy, and where that is true sensible compromise always is possible when civic-minded people strive for an intelligent goal. There would perhaps be no protest from the South Hills if there could be assurance that the Tube tolls would be ended as soon as the improvements at the entrance are paid for.

But that tolls on the Tubes should be continued until the entire cost of the improvements in other districts are repaid to the federal government raises a natural and justifiable objection. The commissioners, admittedly, are confronted by the rule of the Washington authorities that four-fifths of the money will not be loaned unless the loan can be amortized on a pay-as-you-go plan. They face the probability that, with no tolls on the Liberty Tubes, and a fee charged for use of the projected Fort Duquesne tunnel, the Liberty would continue to bear a heavy traffic load and income from the new South Hills traffic artery would be curtailed.

There are reports that the controversy already has had an effect on Washington, Secretary Ickes intimating that the requested $30,000,000 is too large a sum to be granted, and at the same time mentioning knowledge of an argument here in Allegheny county.

Congressman Henry Ellenbogen is reported to have informed the federal officials of the conflict. The place to settle this problem is here in Pittsburgh, as Congressman Clyde Kelly aptly points out. This is no sectional problem though of course the South Hills will receive the chief benefit.

But what aids one section of the county helps all, and in that spirit, too often ignored, the subject should be approached, so Washington could be convincingly appealed to, and work can start.

The legislation creating the Authority was passed last year. It is time to get busy with construction.

Running on Two Tickets

Plan to Pre-empt Party Labels for Candidates to Oppose Democratic-Republican Nominees.

In some congressional districts where Democratic candidates in the May primary won both the Republican and Democratic nominations, Republican leaders are preparing to pre-empt party labels for the benefit of an orthodox Republican who then will contest with the Democrat. The plan calls for the temporary party to carry the names of the statewide Republican candidates as well as that of the congressional nominee.

In the absence of legislation preventing candidates running in more than one primary, the Republican plan has merit. So long as government is formed under a two-party system there should be some means by which voters at a general election can make a direct choice as between the principles of the contenders. Local contests seldom turn on matters more important than the merits of the candidates, but there are some sharp differences of principle in national affairs.

The next session of the Legislature is to be asked to reenact legislation, similar to that passed in 1933, confining candidates, except for the judiciary, to one party. The bill passed previously was vetoed by Gov. Pinchot, who recited that the Attorney General, William A. Schnader, said it violated the right of freedom in elections. Now, despite the fact that Mr. Schnader is their gubernatorial candidate, the Republicans have insisted on re-passage of the bill. Democrats supported it in 1933.

While the action of the Republicans now is commendable, it is nevertheless fair to point out that when their party was dominant, when Republicans were winning Democratic nominations rather than the reverse, nothing was heard from the party on the subject.

Traffic Violations

Ignoring Yellow and Red Warning Lights Constitute Most Dangerous Evasion of Law

A most frequent traffic violation is the ignoring of yellow caution lights and even the red stop lights. Careless and reckless motorists, and some trolley operators, make a practice of crossing intersections in the face of a yellow light, though it has furnished them ample warning before the corner is reached. More often than not the light has turned red before they clear the intersection.

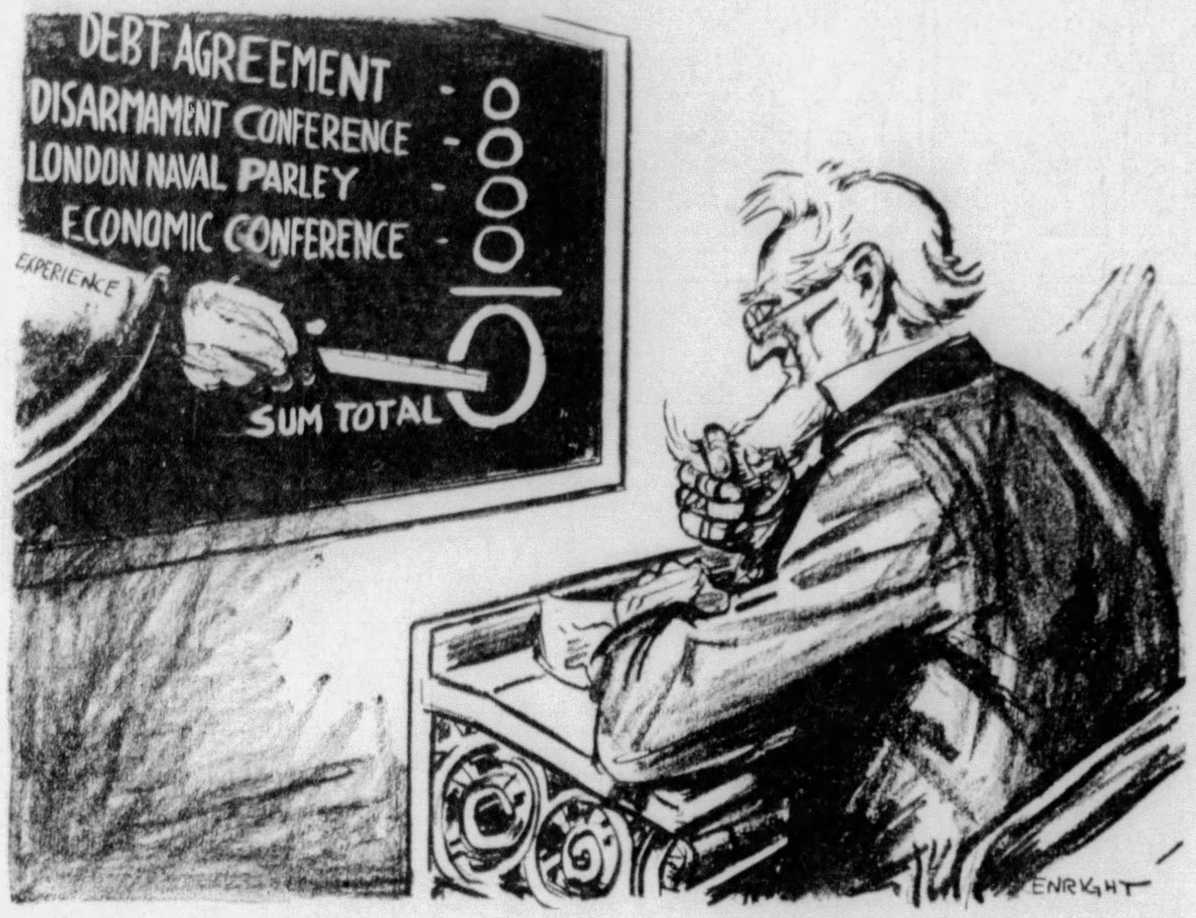
Some, entirely heedless of their own safety and that of others, even dash through red lights.

A more strict enforcement of regulations respecting lights is needed. Some of this can be brought about by summary police action, though the police cannot be at all corners. The simplest protective measure would be for motorists themselves to obey the lights, without compulsion. They are erected for safety, and not as mere whims to annoy the hasty driver who usually has nothing much to do with the few seconds he saves by evasion.

It might be well for the "Traffic Observers" to consider making reports and even lodging informations against those who jeopardize other motorists.

European Arithmetic

(Copyright, 1934.)



America has before it a painful lesson—painful to pride and to purse, on the folly of becoming entangled in European affairs.

As Experience, bitter teacher, points out in the above cartoon, Uncle Sam gets a "goose-egg," in sports writers' parlance, for his meddling overseas. Glance at the chart above and go over the addition with him.

Samuel knows now that "Yes," when said to him by Europe, sometimes means "Maybe," sometimes "Perhaps," usually "NO" and NEVER "Yes," as in the War Debt Defaults. He knows the London Naval Conference was a "Flop," the London Economic Conference a "Fizzle," the Disarmament Conference a "Farce."

When will he learn to stay at home and keep out of European affairs?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 21.—New York's over-supply of left-over speakeasy restaurants hang on, hoping for some miracle that will fill them again. There are several hundred in mid-town not earning their salt. The sudden swing from them to big hotel dining rooms seems permament.

Even law abiding cafes grapple with the same desolation that hit legitimate theaters. The boomerang is that patrons believe that hotel restaurants, with their heavier investments, are likelier to serve a better brand of liquors. Too, the hotels have garnered the best dance orchestras.

Liquor stores also are in a quandry. Any number of them do not earn enough to pay license fees. Big department stores are not only able to undersell, but again there is confidence inspired by old-established institutions that have proved their honesty.

New York, after years of downing inconceivably vile concoctions, has become amazingly boot-legger leery. The most noticable result of the clean-up has been the quick death of the clip-joints, where so many were not only poisoned and bludgeoned but often murdered.

* * *

The biggest backlog in the literary blaze, Hervey Allen, appeared to fulfill expectations at his first New York cocktail party. One impassioned glossarian described him thus: "A large, simple, highly unliterary looking man, he seemed a King Canute with tides of gossip lapping sibilantly at his feet." With "Anthony Adverse" approaching a half million sale, Allen will rest on his oars for a year or more before beginning another. He does not look unlike Vincent Youmans, the composer.

I knew Lew Cody longer and perhaps more intimately than anyone in the movies. He was a stark worldling but with most innate respect for the decencies. He came of distinguished French-Canadian parents, studied medicine, law, and read deep of the classics. I ran on to him an hour after his arrival in Paris for the first time. His French was so perfect everyone thought him Parisian born. He lived hard and gallantly on the volcano edge. Often he told me he would go out as he did—in a flash. Medically minded, he knew of a fatal valvular lesion.

Indiana has long been America's most legended literary belt, incubating such masters as George Ade, Booth Tarkington, Meredith Nicholson, Kin Hubbard, James Whitcomb Riley, General Lew Wallace, Albert J. Beveridge and so many other writing stars. I thought of the Indiana halo the other day when at a table at the St. Regis were grouped Edwin C. Hill, Elmer Davis and Frank B. Shutts, all born and reared in Aurora, Ind. and doing their part to sustain the Hoosier tradition.

Evelyn Thaw is owner of Gibson's famous picture, "The Eternal Question," for which she was model. The black and white study became especially well known during the sensational Thaw trial and was later featured on post cards over the world. The original is the only article of sustained value Evelyn salvaged out of contact with the Thaw millions. Somebody tells me she has received an offer as high as $15,000 for it. But collectors have told her the older it becomes the more valuable. And it's not improbable some day it will demand $50,000. Thaw once coveted it.

I am told, too that the only face-to-face between Thaw and Evelyn since their final split up took place on a Broadway corner seven years ago. It was, strangely enough, directly across from the site of the now razed Casino, the scene of her Floradora triumphs and where she was wooed by the eccentric Pittsburgher. Evelyn stood waiting a traffic go-ahead when he stepped out of a taxi a few feet away. He stared, hesitated and in confusion bolted.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

We Shock the Russians!

Do those Russians, with their free love and socialistic work schemes, shock you? Then what a wollop you'd get out of hearing how the Russians feel about US!

For, according to the U. S. S. R. the U. S. A. is a pest hole of vicious frivolity and downright iniquity—a menace to the whole civilized world! And they don't mean maybe. What's more, they're doing something about it.

Mad enough to be interested? You should be. And you'll be madder still when you hear the whole story. It's called "RUSSIA TODAY." Sherwood Eddy wrote it. Farrar & Rinehart published it. You can get it at any book store for $2.50. And if you have to hock your best pants for the wherewithal, GET THAT BOOK AND READ IT. Then laugh it off—if you can!

Sherwood Eddy isn't rooting for the Russians. To the contrary he's definitely "agin" a lot of their institutions. But after a fair survey he has to admit that they're calling our bluff.

For instance, there's this notion we have that America is God's Own Country for Bringing Up a Family. According to the Russians, there's something extremely wrong with that picture.

For how about the movies? The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America claimed in prosperous times a weekly attendance of 115 millions. (We have only about 121 millions in population.) Every American youngster that can earn, borrow, or mooch the money gets to the movies; sits through two shows; talks about 'em for a week after. As an educational influence on 12-year-old Billy and Bessie, movies have schools backed off the map.

And what do Billy and Bessie get out of that influence? Prof. Dale, of Ohio State University, made an investigation. Found that "crime, sex and love were the subject of 82 per cent of all feature films."

What do we do about that? We don't do anything about it. We just give Billy and Bessie two-bits and tell them to run along.

But the Russians do something very definitely about it. THEY SAY OUR MOVIES ARE "DEMORALIZING" — THAT THEY "INCULCATE FALSE IDEALS REGARDING WEALTH, LUXURY, DRINKING, SEX AND CRIME," AND THEY REFUSE TO ADMIT NINE-TENTHS OF OUR AMERICAN FILMS INTO RUSSIA!

"Russia," says Sherwood Eddy, "takes her art seriously. Like everything else, it has a purpose and a plan. The Russians conceive the theater, cinema and radio not as an avenue for money-making, or even primarily for entertainment, but "a school for human behavior" in the impressionable minds of youths and adults. They would no more contemplate the prostitution of the cinema for the enrichment of a few profiteers than they would that of their school system.

"In the West we think of the moving picture industry for profit or exploitation, for entertainment or excitement. In the Soviet Union it is a great educational force, to build the new social order.

More than one hundred million Russians visited the theaters, operas and movies of the U. S. S. R. in 1932. What "ideals of human behavior" did they absorb? Penthouse passion? Gangland orgies? Seven reels of alluring propaganda which will firmly convince any infant female that the "wages of sin" is NOT death but star-cut sapphires, honest-t'-gawd sables and Dusenberg cars? Not at all! Listen!

"The hero of the cinema is not a two-gun wild west adventurer, a successful gangster, a profiteer, a luxurious parasite, a seducer, nor a selfish individualist out for his own pleasure or profit. He is always the social leader, often of the Edison type, who builds a railway, heals disease, drains the swamps, lifts the level of well-being and happiness of the whole community. And in the end the spotlight falls not upon the hero as such, nor upon the film star, but upon the cause, the idea, the Revolution, the new social order. One sees portrayed a new creative epoch in human history."

So is little Bessie going to marry the grocer boy and raise a family on $23.50 a week? Or is she going to pluck her eyebrows, give her hair a henna wash and look around for Something Better? While as for young Billy, add this:

"One boy convicted of crime said: 'As I became older, the luxuries of life showed in the movies made me want to possess them.' Among a group of truants and boys who had gone wrong, fifty-five per cent said that the pictures of gangsters had stimulated them to desire to follow their example.

"One boy of eighteen convicted of robbery said: 'I would see in a picture the Big Shot come into a cabaret. Everyone would greet him with a smile. The girls would all crowd around him . . . When I would see pictures like this I would go wild and say that some day I would be a Big Shot.' Of one hundred and ten young men in prison, forty-nine per cent said that the movies had created in them the desire to carry a gun and twenty-eight per cent a desire to pull off a holdup.

"Of the goals of life held up before children in American films only nine per cent could be classed as social. In Russia over ninety per cent are such . . . The American film, organized for profit, is a moral menace not only in the United States but to the youth in other lands."

So what? Here we are boasting that we're the world's most civilized nation. And there's Russia putting the bee on us with our movies! Makes you feel pretty cheap, doesn't it? Get that book. Read some more. You'll feel still worse!

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Sometimes fathers-in-law and frequently mothers-in-law are responsible for discord in the homes of young married couples.

Meddling in the affairs of a married couple often results in serious estrangements among those who otherwise might have overcome their points of difference.

It is natural for a mother to support the side of her own child.

Mothers who have submerged their own comforts and desires in order to add to the pleasure and enjoyment of a child expect that the chosen helpmate will do likewise.

But this is expecting too much.

Too frequently a son or daughter will show preference for an indulgent parent rather than the wife or husband with consequent trouble in the family.

Parents have no right to usurp the position of husband or wife to their children.

The permanency of a new family unit depends upon both parties standing by each other.

Parents should not interfere.

Excavation of Ur of the Chaldees Eclipses the Finding Of Tomb of King Tutankhamen.

By Edwin C. Hill

A WORLD, which went wild over the discovery of the tomb of King Tutankhamen, has taken with surprising calmness the excavation of Ur of the Chaldees, ancient city at the junction of the Tigris and Euphrates, mentioned in the Bible as the city of Abraham. And yet, these explorations are far more important historically than those which unearthed the young Pharoah. Such an authority as Dr. Horace F. Jayne classes them as easily the equal of any so far made.

The expedition at Ur, sent out by the British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania, has made its final field report through its director, Dr. C. Leonard Wooley, and from it we learn of the great civilization which existed there five thousand years ago. Bones of men and women, kings and queens, commoners and slaves have been found in two hundred graves, of which Dr. Jayne says:

"In these royal tombs, which give mute evidence of human sacrifices on a lavish scale, were found an unbelievable wealth of jewelry, harps of silver and wood, vessels, weapons and tools of gold and silver, inlaid gaming boards and vanity boxes—all attesting to the artistry, the culture and the luxury of the royal court at Ur, five thousand years ago."

* * *

Find Evidence of Noah's Flood

IT was at Ur that Dr. Wooley and his diggers came upon a find which scientists accept as direct evidence of the flood described in the Bible. The explorers had unearthed the ruins of a city when they struck a layer of clean white clay, apparently virgin soil with nothing below it. However, they decided to go a little deeper and, to their surprise and delight, came upon a civilization sixty centuries old buried beneath eight feet of this mysterious clay. There could be only one explanation for such a deep layer of sediment separating two distinct civilizations. Dr. Wooley gives it in these words:

"Taking into consideration all the facts, there can be no doubt that the flood of which we had thus found the only possible evidence, was the flood of Sumerian history and legend—the flood on which is based the story of Noah."

One cannot mention the excavation of Biblical lands without bringing in Sir Charles Marston who made millions building motorcycles, and who is spending them now in Palestine and Mesopotamia to prove the authenticity of the Old Testament. Sir Charles, one of the leading Biblical students of the world, says that it is his purpose to ascertain by excavation how far the early books are correct. He has financed the work of the celebrated Professor John Garstang and the results have been remarkable, particularly those treating with the invasion of the Promised Land by Joshua after the death of Moses.

Joshua's passage of the Jordan and his blowing down the walls of Jericho have been classed hitherto, not only by skeptics but also by clergymen, as folk stories of the category of Jonah and the whale.

Today it is proved beyond reasonable doubt that landslides and earthquakes, both common to the region, dry up the bed of the Jordan for hours, easily permitting such a passage as that of Joshua and the Israelites. Much of the controversy over the Bible may be traced to the fact that most of us, laymen and scientific men alike, read it in the light of conditions and things as they exist today, and not as they might have been 10,000 years ago. Samson's destruction of the temple of the Philistines is a case in point.

* * *

How Samson Pulled Down the Temple

THE word "temple" conveys to the mind a great building of stone or bick supported by massive columns of like material. If we accept that picture, then we must have a belief in the supernatural to accept the story that a human pulled down the edifice with his hands. Yet, a recent archaeological discovery permits, even compels, credence in the story as it appears in the Bible.

Excavators have found at Gezer a temple in the form of a flat roof with galleries, all supported on wooden pillars set in stone sockets. A crowd of Philistines could have been on such a roof and a man with not half the prowess which is credited to Samson could have pulled one of the supports out of line, causing the collapse of the structure.

Recently in the New York Times Mr. P. W. Wilson discussed the proof of many other Bible stories by archeology. His summing up is well worth repeating, Mr. Wilson said:

"We are left, surely, with a general conclusion. It is inescapable. The annals of the Old Testament have been subject to a scrutiny absolutely unique in the records of historical inquiry. In order to test the truth of a single phrase, expeditions have gone forth and labored for months, even years.

"The broad result has been decisive. We realize that the narratives of Scripture, apparently so simple and at times so improbable on the surface, convey by implication the essentials of a destiny as astounding as it is actual. This great sequence of events is not fiction. It happened."

President's Leadership Marks Last Congress

By James T. Williams, Jr.

HISTORY will doubtless find in the legislative leadership of the President the distinctive feature of the life and work of the Sventy-third Congress.

From first to last, this leadership has been chiefly responsible for the sum and the substance of the legislative enactments of the first Congress to meet since the Norris amendment which limited the Congress to one regular session, but left to the President's discretion the convening of Congress in extra session.

Nearly all of the legislation enacted by this Congress, both at the extra session, which met soon after President Roosevelt's inauguration, and at the regular session, which began last January, originated in the White House.

A great deal of this legislation was drafted by executive experts. These experts assisted the congressional committees in preparing the bills and reports and in perfecting the amendments that were necessary either to meet the requirements of the President or to overcome opposition in Congress.

The Seventy-third Congress has been chiefly engaged from the day it started until it closed in delegating the President its constitutional authorities and responsibility, and in approving his recommendations for the appropriations of vast sums of public money to be expended under his direction.

* * *

President Avoids Undesirable Bills

ALTHOUGH the President has not obtained all the legislation he desired, no President in history has been more successful in heading off legislation which he did not wish.

Of the comparatively few vetoes recorded under this administration, the only one which Congress has overridden was that of the Independent Offices' bill. This measure Mr. Roosevelt disapproved because, according to his estimate, it added $228,000,000 a year to the federal tax burden inflicted upon the people, and revived a form of "presumptive" disability payments for veterans which he vigorously condemned.

The only treaty which the President attempted without success to have ratified was the St. Lawrence waterways treaty. The defeat of this treaty is generally attributed to railroad opposition, just as the overriding of the President's veto of the independent offices' act was chiefly due to the opposition of veterans' organizations.

But the President has put the country on notice that he will renew his effort at the beginning of the next Congress to obtain the Senate's advice and consent to the ratification of the St. Lawrence treaty, and few are the senators who believe that his next effort will not succeed.

Seldom in days of peace has political partisanship been so conspicuous by its absense as during the life of the Seventy-third Congress. There have been comparatively few divisions on strictly party lines on most of the administration measures for which this Congress is nominally responsible.

* * *

Congress Distrusts Own Leadership

THE leadership of action raised up by the President and the docility with which the Congress has followed where he led have been due to two causes:

The common desire to conquer the depression as swiftly as possible.

The common preference for the legislative leadership of the President to any leadership of which the Democratic party in Congress appeared to be capable.

The record will show that the Democratic House has, for the most part, been bereft of any leadering of its own creation and that the Democratic Senate has on frequent occasions refused to support such leadership as it possessed.

The leaderless condition of the House finally necessitated the adoption of a drastic gag rule, the real purpose of which was to discipline the Democratic majority in that body, a majority generally admitted to be too large to be workable.

The reluctance of the Democratic majority in the Senate to support its leadership finally subjected the Senate to the supine predicament in which it found itself last Saturday night. The majority leadership was unable to carry out its agreement with the minority or its agreement with the House to adjourn on that day. This necessitated the recess over the week-end and served to warn the country how completely dependent the Seventy-third Congress has been from first to last upon the legislative leadership of the man in the White House.

In time of war, such dependence is customary. In time of peace, it has seldom gone so far.
